Mr. Rockefeller's Choice.
Mr. Ford's 64 Years.
Mr. Hoover's Bright Hopes.
Mrs. Taylor's Song Fear.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1927.)

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., told the 26 Broadway Club, all employes of Standard Oil, that the four important qualities are CHARACTER, INTEGRITY, CLEAN LIVING, SINGLENESS OF PURPOSE.

Mr. Rockefeller's father, who built one of the greatest fortunes and uses it fighting disease and ignorance, selected two things, important in material success, PATIENCE AND ECONOMY.

WHICH is most important—Character, integrity, clean living or singleness of purpose? Singleness of purpose brings success. Character and clean living make it worth while. Integrity is the foundation of the other three.

USEFUL thought is promoted by defining and ranking, according to their importance, the qualities within us. Saint Paul, thirteenth chapter, First Corinthians, selects "Faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

BACON'S three aids to mental efficiency, quoted from memory are "reading maketh a full man. Writing maketh an exact man. Speaking maketh a ready man."

Bacon's three should interest young salesmen.

AT LONDON'S first exhibition of the Ford car the crowd was so great "it was difficult to elbow one's way into the room." The low prices amaze the British and disturb British manufacturers. Ford, with plants in Paris, England, Ireland, Peking and elsewill operate inside the tariff walls.

IN ONE particular respect the new Ford is better than the Lincoln. Its windshield is made of non-shattering glass, which does not fly about in case of collision.

ON THE first day London ordered 64,000 new Ford cars, and 450,000 new Fords have been ordered already in the United States.

The Canadian demand is proportionately as great. Stock in the Ford Company of Canada has gone up $400 a share.

"Singleness of purpose," which Mr. Rockefeller recommends, seems to have worked well in Henry Ford's case.

WHAT interests men past middle age is the fact that Henry Ford, who for thirty years has worked under terrific pressure, day and night, eclipsing in achievement every industrialist, manufacturer and big business man that ever lived, is able at sixty-four years of age to throw aside and junk the greatest collection of tools and machinery in the world and start new. He has closed down a business that would have paid him millions of profit a year, had he been content to let it "gradually die out."

And at sixty-four, with the energy of twenty-five, he creates a new, gigantic business, doing that which his friends and competitors alike would have thought impossible.

SECRETARY HOOVER, who has traveled up and down in the United States investigating conditions and possibilities of improvement, year in and year out, is optimistic in his report for 1927.

"Real wages in the United States remain higher than anywhere else in the world, or in any time of the world's history."

Knowing what the resources of this country are, he sees "lasting prosperity." Mr. Hoover is one of the men whose earnestness, sincerity and good work help to create and maintain prosperity.

MRS. TAYLOR, talented Los Angeles musician, says we sing the wrong kind of songs, which accounts for our crime wave. Such songs as "Red Hot Mamma," says this lady, "drive youth to crime." Young people sing the foolish songs, and young people fill the modern prisons.

Saxophones are harmless. Jazz properly used is all right, songs about love are all right, and drive nobody to crime, if they are modest. Mrs. Taylor writes some herself. It is "Red Hot Mamma" affection that does the harm.

ALL over the world the real war is industrial war, which has no armistice and never stops. France and Germany have combined in a gigantic dye trust, good for both countries, because it will make money, and France and Germany having interest in common, may forget about fighting.

We are developing big units here. The second and third biggest chain stores in the United States, Kresge and Kress, are planning a $250,000,000 merger. They do a business of $190,000,000 a year. And Julius Rosenwald, all by himself, does as much.

THE Canadian Pacific Railroad, the stock of which went climbing yesterday, is operated in a country with population smaller than that within forty miles of New York's City Hall. What makes Wall Street pay such high prices for a Canadian railroad?

How do you explain the Canadian government's ability to operate Canada's national railroads, national telegraph and telephone systems well with a profit?

POISON 200 AT CHURCH

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., Dec. 3.—Two hundred people, who attended a chicken supper at the First Baptist Church, today are recovering from ptomaine poisoning. A dozen or more are seriously ill, but so far there have been no deaths.

Women of the church prepared the supper at their homes and served it in the church auditorium, and every person who partook of the supper became ill.

Physicians stated that the entire supply of gravy had been poisoned, as the result of one of the women leaving the gravy in an aluminum container too long before taking it to the church. All the gravy was collected into one container to heat and in that way the entire supply was contaminated.

The Rev. E. L. Safford is pastor of the congregation.

Ears for $2,500 A-Plenty

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—The market for left ears was bullish today, as a dozen young women and three men offered their portside aural appendage to the unnamed New York and Chicago society woman who advertised for one.

Jay J. McCarthy, the attorney whose client has sought through the want ad columns to get an ear to replace one she lost in a motor accident abroad, said that the offer of

FATHER FIGHTS THROUGH FLAMES

When Barkley's home, 511 Shawano street, North Side, caught fire yesterday, his two baby daughters were trapped in the blazing front room. Rushing through the flames the father snatched up the babies and plunged back to safety. The baby carriage in which the year-old child, Helen, left, was sleeping was completely destroyed in the fire. She was slightly burned about the face. Kathryn, 3, was unhurt. The father was burned on the face and hands.

Faith of the sort that "moves mountains.

Tender memories of the kind that make it impossible for her to believe that her husband could have dropped out of sight of his own accord. These are what makes Mrs. George J. Vogel say:

Despite rumors, supposed clues and whispered names of other women, the little wife, so saddened by the double tragedy that has struck her home with merciless cruelty, believes in the father of her children. The chain store owner dropped from sight

BLAST BEACH 'CONFESSION'

THE Peach COMPLETE MARKETS

HIT STORY HE TOLD OF GUILT IN BALTIMORE

By International News Service.

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 3.—The defense in the trial of Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl and Willis Beach, charged jointly with the murder of Mrs. Lilliendahl's aged husband, played its ace of trumps as court opened today by putting on a witness who testified that Beach was in Pennsylvania on the day the state claims he confessed to the crime in Baltimore.

The surprise witness, Mrs. Ellen Parker, of Lynwood Heights, near Chester, Pa., told in a calm voice the story with which the defense plans to blast the state's case, referring to Beach as "Uncle Bill." She was asked if she knew where Beach was on October 1, the day on which Samuel Bark, star prosecution witness, testified the chicken farmer defendant confessed the slaying to him in Baltimore.

"Why, yes," Mrs. Parker answered, "he was at my house."

Q.—How long did he stay at your home?

A.—Until October 4.

Q.—At any time between these dates was he in Baltimore?

A.—He was not. He never left my house between September 27 and October 4.

Q.—Are you a relative of Mrs. Beach?

A.—No, just a friend.

Q.—How far is your home from Baltimore?

A.—About 96 miles.

On cross examination Mrs. Parker said that Beach slept and ate at her home during the period mentioned.

"I had no objection, I knew he had nothing to do with this crime," she said.

James Parker, her husband, in answer to questions by Assistant Prosecutor Hinkle stated that Beach was in the loft of his home when detectives searched his home for him, and that he ate and slept there. He didn't answer a question as to why Beach did not eat at the table with him, but stated that he did not know Beach was wanted by the authorities. Parker said he didn't see the two men who came in a blue sedan to ask about Beach.

Beach today took the stand and flatly denied the state's charge that he had conspired with Mrs. Lilliendahl to murder her aged husband.

Thaw, Girls Hollywood Bound

By International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Mystery surrounded the arrival here today of Harry K. Thaw.

Thaw dashed around a railroad station searching madly for somebody. He telephoned somebody. He then went to the Drake Hotel.

"Mr. Thaw," he was asked, "Is it true you are taking a bevy of beauties to Hollywood to place them in the movies?"

"What!" exploded Mr. Thaw, "Who says so?"

"There's nothing to it," he added.

Thaw was given room 622. In room 621 were registered a "Miss A. Rivers of New York" and a "Miss A. Hughes of New York."

Thaw has reservations to leave for the Pacific Coast tonight. So have "Miss A. Rivers" and "Miss A. Hughes."

Bomb Stirs Mob

By International News Service.

OTTAWA, Ill., Dec. 3.—Extreme precautions were being taken today to guard the cell of Hiram Reed, 24-year-old youth, who confessed planting a dynamite bomb in a schoolhouse stove to kill Miss Iola Bradford, his sweetheart. Feeling is running high against the youth and authorities are fearful of mob violence.

Miss Bradford, 20-year-old teacher, was terribly mangled by the explosion. Her chances for recovery are slight, according to attending physicians. The blast went off when she started a fire in a little schoolhouse stove at Dana, Ill., where she taught.

Reed told authorities that Miss Bradford had been insistent that they be married.

"Two months ago she told me she was in trouble. I knew that meant I was in trouble, too. It was then I conceived the plot to get rid of her.

State's Attorney Russell Hanson has taken charge of the case. Justice of the Peace George Oenig, before whom Reed was arraigned, continued the hearing for 10 days pending the outcome of the school teacher's injuries.

CALLES ORDERED U. S. CLERGYMAN BE PAID $210,000 'FOR LECTURES'

TODAY'S DISCLOSURES

Documents published by The Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers today show that President Calles ordered money from the Mexican treasury paid to two American clergymen.

One of these men was ordered paid $60,000 in two different sums, and the other, a rabbi, was ordered paid $150,000. These payments were ordered for propaganda work in favor of Mexico.

By JOHN PAGE

(Copyright, 1927, by the Washington Herald.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The Hearst papers today publish Mexican presidential orders for propaganda payments to two American clergymen, a Protestant minister and a rabbi; also official correspondence showing an attempt to resurrect the old bugaboo of American oil interests plotting revolution in Mexico.

President Calles, the Mexican executive, issued two orders for the payment of money to the Protestant clergyman; one for $10,000 on May 15, 1926, and the other for $50,000, on February 15, 1927. The Hearst papers have the original orders, signed by Calles, with the name of the proposed recipient intact.

In the facsimile of one of these orders, published elsewhere in The Sun-Telegraph, the name has been deleted; likewise in the English translations, which follow:

To the Citizen Secretary of the Treasury and Public Credit:

You will please order the Treasurer General of the nation a pay warrant in favor of ——— ——— for the sum of $10,000, to be delivered by him to the Reverend ——— ———, as payment for lectures in favor of Mexico.

You will order that a receipt be obtained from the interested person for this sum, making the corresponding notation and charging the item to secret expenditures of the presidency of the republic.

The second order, to the same Protestant clergyman, was for $50,000, dated February 15, 1927. It follows, textually:

WITNESS DECLARES IMOGENE THREATENED LIFE OF REMUS

BRANDISHED GUN AT HUSBAND

COURTROOM, CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 3. — George Conners, henchman and friend of George Remus, returned to the witness stand today and charged that Mrs. Imogene Remus once threatened the life of her husband and started to draw a revolver.

Conners, having said he held an opinion as to the sanity or insanity of the one-time "king of bootleggers," went on to relate other incidents that gave rise to the opinion.

Remus' defense is that he was driven insane before the killing, his mind becoming impaired because of the stories he heard concerning Mrs. Remus and her alleged paramour, Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., former Department of Justice operative.

The revolver episode, he said, took place when Conners, Remus and others went out to the Price Hill mansion in the hope of effecting a settlement between husband and wife.

Mrs. Remus said, "What are you people doing here? This is my house," Conners related. And Remus replied, "You can stay here if you want to. I'll go to a hotel, if you don't want me here."

SAYS ENEMIES GOT VOGEL

November 13, and this week they buried his 17-year-old son, Robert.

Her voice drones on in an even, soft tone, and she displays her feelings only in the nervous way her hands clutch her arms above the elbows.

Mrs. Vogel has lost 20 pounds, and as she peers through her shell rimmed glasses and goes on so bravely you wonder how fate could be so unkind to a good woman and mother.

She says:

"Yes, someone got him. He is the victim of his own big heart because he always was so generous.

"If he ever gave anything to women, he gave it because they came to him with a hard luck story. No man could have been so good and kind to his family as my George and have been mixed up with other women. Every Sunday evening he spent at home with me —without fail. And other evenings when he wasn't working.

"I never had heard of that ring they say he gave to Myrtle Gift. If it had been his ring, made for him, wouldn't I have seen it? Surely. George only wore one ring. That was a signet, with a small 'G' on it. I gave it to him years ago. It was about the size of a karat diamond, I think, and he had grown so stout he couldn't get it off his finger. So, if he is found, that ring will be on him, unless someone filed it off. It would be a good mark of identification."

A jeweler on the North Side is said to have recognized a ring as being the one he made for Vogel when the Gift girl tried to pawn it.

Mrs. Vogel declares she knows nothing about her husband's financial worries, but scouts the theory that he could have been in business trouble.

"George always said to me when I wanted anything and asked how much it would cost, 'now don't you worry sweetheart—who is paying the bills?'"

The Sunday he disappeared, in the morning, I came down stairs, and found money on the table. Every Sunday morning, before he went to his office, he left a roll of bills. Before he left the house, he came up stairs, kissed me, and said, 'What time will we have dinner, my darling?' and I said, 'about 4 o'clock.' "When he didn't return at 4, I got worried."

GIFT TO NEEDY MEMORIAL

has departed, an act of charity and loving-kindness would be highly appropriate, it was pointed out, especially at this season, when the whole world is preparing to celebrate the birthday of the Savior to whom Christians instinctively direct their thoughts in thinking of the dead—the Savior who said that an act of kindness to the poor and unfortunate was the same as if He were the recipient.

The Twenty Neediest Cases are all so pitiful, so deserving of aid, that a number of contributors to the fund have found it impossible to discriminate. They no sooner decide to send their gifts to one specific case than their hearts are wrung by compassion for the other unhappy families whose plight has been described. And so they end by doing the same as a family from whom a contribution was received a day or two ago and who wrote:

"Each case seems so worthy that we could not designate any special one; so we just enclose our check, and ask that it be distributed the best way."

Here is an example of how one of last year's neediest cases was helped on its feet through benevolence of the kind that Pittsburghers are again asked to display this Christmas. The case is reported by the Volunteers of America:

"The father was a lather, but work was hard to get, and after looking for months for something to do, not having had sufficient food, he fell an easy prey to pneumonia. There were six children in the family, the oldest a girl of 15, the youngest a baby of 3. One of the children had St. Vitus dance, and none of them was overly strong.

"The children were taken to an institution, and employment found for the mother. Food and clothing were furnished. The father recovered and went to work. A position was found for the oldest girl.

"Owing to the help received, which pulled them through a situation that had looked hopeless, the family are today in a better neighborhood. They are standing on their own feet, helping themselves, and will enjoy a nice Christmas of their own making."

The Twenty Neediest Cases of today seem desperate, too, but they also can be placed on the road to happiness if Pittsburghers will come to their rescue by providing them with the means to procure food, clothing, fuel, medicine and medical attention.

The Twenty Neediest Cases have been reported by the Associated Charities, the Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Pittsburgh, the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the "Twenty Neediest Cases Fund" and sent to The Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., or, if preferred, to one of the societies named.

All of the 20 cases were described in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph. One case will be repeated each day. Here is Case No. 6:

John, an alert bright-eyed boy of 10, is, so his mother fondly declares, already beginning to take his father's place and manifests a feeling of responsibility for her and his younger brothers. Poor little Sammie is blind. When last July Mrs. B was told that Mr. B was insane and should go to Mayview she would take no action in the matter until after she had consulted John, who was having a vacation at a summer camp for boys. Now that she is alone with the children it is John to whom she turns at every point. "Now don't worry about Mom, Sammie and Joe, 'cause me and the lady that comes to our house are taking care of them," John wrote his father. Fifty-two dollars a month added to the day-work earnings of the mother will provide for this family.

(Reported by the Associated Charities.)

Case No. 7 will be described tomorrow.

Club Leader

HARRY M. HUNTER

The secretary of the new Keystone Athletic Club was one of those who helped to arrange final financial details concerning the club's building now under construction in Wood street.

KEYSTONE A. C. BOND ISSUE ARRANGED

The final transaction involving financial arrangements for the construction and completion of a 21-story home for the Keystone Athletic Club was completed yesterday when a $1,650,000 bond issue deal was closed by officers of the club, of the Colonial Trust Company and bank representatives. The trust company is trustee for the bondholders.

Announcement was made that second mortgage bonds of $300,000 also have been sold.

A surety bond of $1,620,000 of the Fidelity and Casualty Company of Maryland calls for positive completion of the building by December 1, 1928. At present, work is being rushed by the Foundation Company on caisson work at the club property, Third avenue and Wood street, excavation having been completed. The Mellon-Stuart Company is the general contractor.

Few, if any, similar athletic clubs in the country, it is said, have been able to organize, finance and insure building a comparable home in so short time as the Keystone Athletic Club. In the club will be every kind of modern athletic and social equipment, including swimming pool, complete gymnasium, dining rooms, grill rooms, bowling alleys, private dining rooms, 10 floors of guest rooms, and handball and squash courts.

Officers and directors are: E. H. Eggleston, president; Charles J. Caspar, vice president; J. C. M White, treasurer; Harry H. Hunter, secretary; George W. Kepler, W. Y. Cocken, John E. McCalmont, James B. Kelly, E. C. Clark, MacGilvray Shiras, George T. Ladd and Leo G. Griffith.

Florance N. Reed, late of 438 Rosedale street, leaves a $22,000 estate to his wife for life, and at her death to his daughters. The will, written on a single sheet of stationery of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was made October 5, 1927.

PLENTY OF EARS

$2,500 first made would be doubled provided the transfer of the ear from seller to buyer proved successful.

MOTHER WANTS $4,000

One offer came from a young mother who wanted $4,000 instead of the offered $2,500. Pressing bills, she explained, made her willing to make the sacrifice.

Another offer came from Miss Doris Clarke, young, pretty, and, she explained, broke. She wanted a fur coat and proposed to market a left ear if it met the requirements.

Miss Clarke said she came to Chicago three months ago from Rockford, Ill., to start a career and earn money to buy herself pretty clothes. When she read the "personal" advertisement yesterday, however, she was jobless and without money, being dependent upon a woman friend for a living.

WANTS FUR COAT

"I'm tired of being without money, the nice dresses and the fur coat most Chicago girls have," she wrote. "I think a fur coat will do me lots more good than my little old left ear."

Miss Clarke wears a shingle bob, and the "little old left ear" stands boldly out against a brunet background. She thinks a wig would make things all right until her hair grew out.

One of the offers by men came from a war veteran who explained that "nobody cares how I look, anyway."

McCarthy said he would examine the left ears offered, eliminating those he found unfit through dissimilarity with the right ear of his client. The final choice, he added, will be made by his client herself.

Prospect Number One Bought the Car

Mrs. F. T.———, — Craft Ave., decided to sell her "Chevy Cabriolet" car and depended upon The Sun-Tele used car ads to locate a buyer. The first caller said, "I'll take it."

FOR SALE—Late 1927 Chevy cabriolet, A-1 condition; driven 3,000 miles, extras including ball-crank bumpers; price $500; nothing less. Call Mayflower ———.

Surely, its useless to look elsewhere for used car buyers when Sun-Tele is producing such wonderful results.

CALL GRANT 5400

"Oil Bogey"

American oil interests, underwriting a $5,000,000 revolutionary fund for the overthrow of the Mexican government, was the alarming picture drawn for President Calles in a letter written by Arturo M. Elias, Mexican financial agent in New York, at the beginning of the present conflict between church and state in Mexico.

This letter, dated June 23, 1926, conveyed to the Mexican executive certain "information" gathered for Elias by secret agents, whose principal business was that of watching the offices of oil companies. A copy of the communication is in the possession of the Hearst papers.

The practice of the Mexican government during recent years has been, every time it gets into trouble with discontented elements in its own country or faces a controversy with the United States, to accuse American oil interests of being at the bottom of the trouble. Without going into the numberless accusations made against various American oil companies, the Hearst papers state that they have no evidence, written or otherwise, that any revolutionary fund was raised or even discussed by officials of the companies named in the Elias letter.

The Elias letter follows, textually:

New York, N. Y.,
June 23, 1926.

Senor Plutarco Elias Calles,
President of the Mexican Republic,
Mexico, D. F.

My Dear Brother:

This is to salute you very affectionately and inform you of the activities of our enemies with respect to your government.

I have been informed, from a source which merits all credit, that Mr. Guy Stevens, president of the Association of Petroleum Producers in Mexico, a few days ago convoked a gathering in the offices of the association, of the chiefs of the Standard Oil Company, Sinclair Oil Company, International Oil Company and Huasteca Petroleum Company, to ask them to raise the sum of $5,000,000 (five millions of dollars), to aid in fomenting a new revolution to break out in Mexico in the beginning of next August, because of the enforcement of the religious laws and the consequent closing of the Catholic churches at the end of July.

Says Envoy There

Through the same source I learn that Stevens informed those present at the meeting that the revolutionary envoy was present in this city, awaiting the results of the conference, having come recommended to the president of the association by a high Catholic personage of Washington. According to my informant, the representative of the International and Sinclair companies flatly refused the proposition; only the Standard Oil, Huasteca and Transcontinental accepting, saying that the said capital would be subscribed by the three companies which they represented, with the understanding that the revolution should count with a leader of recognized prestige, capable of facing the present Mexican government. A definite decision was deferred pending another meeting.

I believe, with all frankness, that these revolutionary plans are emanations from the priests and reactionaries of Mexico City, who, recognizing in Stevens a natural enemy of our government, are trying to ally the church interests with petroleum interests, which in my opinion would mean its failure. But this serves to manifest to you that the priests of Mexico City are conspiring against your government, and I believe the archbishopric of that city, in announcing the closure of the Catholic churches at the end of July, has for its object the agitation of the fanatic masses of the country in order to lead them later into open revolt against your government. At the same time they will take advantage of the opportunity of agitating American public opinion in this country against your administration, thus prejudicing diplomatic relations between this country and ours, if the necessary measures are not taken.

Watches Offices

I have placed a person of my absolute confidence to watch the offices of Mr. Stevens, in order to ascertain who is the envoy of the Catholics who have come from Mexico to solicit financial aid from our enemies. I hope to be able to discover his identity very quickly and advise you of it, so that if he should return to the country you may detain him on the frontier and obtain from him information as to the persons he represents and their plans against your government.

I must say to you that although I believe these priests' plots are ridiculous, compared to the force and power of your government, nevertheless there exists one point of importance which we should not disregard. That is, that the alliance which the Catholics are seeking with petroleum interests inimical to your government, seeking in this form to place additional obstacles to the enforcement of the new laws, will aggravate the international problem which already exists because of the controversy over the retroactivity of those laws.

May Heaven grant that when the day arrives for the closing of the Catholic churches this may be effected peacefully, without resorting to violence and avoiding the flow of blood, for if this latter thing should happen we should immediately have the American administration against us, and this would give the enemies of your government the opportunity they desire of attacking us and provoking a reaction against us in the public opinion of this country.

Goes to Capital

I am leaving for Washington soon to confer with Tellez (Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican ambassador to the United States) and will telegraph you the result of the conference from there. Haberman is leaving for Mexico City next week accompanied by Mr. C———, with all their expenses paid until their return. I expect to send with him (Haberman) a report on the final result of the interview with Tellez. I hope you will send me, by a safe channel, copies of all the documents exchanged between the government and archbishopric of Mexico. It is very important to have them at hand here in order to use them in press propaganda if it should be necessary.

I hope you will give this information the importance it merits, taking the necessary measures to avoid that enemies of the government in Mexico City take advantage of the situation and agitate the Federal troops with the religious question. I have confidence that your tact and good sense, which ever has characterized you, will secure to you the triumph you merit.

As ever, your brother who loves you,
AME/EL.

President Calles replied in code on June 29 to his half-brother's long letter. This code message is now in the hands of the Hearst papers.

Deciphered, this message follows:

Your letter dated 23. Religious question is not perilous.. Mexican people now of sound mind and not as in 1857. I am confident controlling situation whatever form it may come. I await report that you are sending with envoy. Affectionate salutations,

P. ELIAS CALLES.

HOUSEKEEPER AWARDED $1,642 FOR 16 YEARS WORK

Seeking wages for the 16 years she worked as housekeeper for her brother-in-law, Mrs. May McMinamus yesterday was awarded $1,642 from Henry Ohm, of Metropolitan street, North Side, as a result of a civil action she instituted in Common Pleas Court. HERE'S IDEAL GIFT FOR 69 CENTS

The charm of "All the Funny Folks," that unusual Christmas gift with its story and pictures of capering comic page characters, may easily be understood when it is seen that Jack Lait, noted author, wrote the story in verse.

For Lait, one of America's leading short story, scenario and play writers, has earned through the years a reputation for color and interest—and humor.

And he, writing this jingling story of the parade of comic folks, is no less appreciated than the artist, Louis Biedermann, who arranged the 500 illustrations that, in full color, enliven this 112-page story.

Already thousands of people have recognized that "All the Funny Folks" is an ideal Christmas gift for any child. And that it is only 69 cents takes away from its value in no way.

The book, in spite of this low price, is well bound in green cloth, the color work is beautifully and faithfully retained, and only because of the immense number sold can the price be kept so low.

"All the Funny Folks" is now on sale on more than 100 counters of various Sun-Telegraph dealers. If none of the dealers mentioned below is convenient, see "All the Funny Folks" advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

"All the Funny Folks" may be had at the main office of The Sun-Telegraph, Gazette Square, and the downtown office, Sixth and Liberty avenues, and at the various news agents throughout the city and suburbs.

PARLEY ON EVICTIONS ADJOURNS

A conference started in Sheriff Robert Braun's office this morning to discuss postponement in ejecting several hundred striking miners' families from dwellings owned by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation as a result of a Superior Court decision, was adjourned until Monday.

Sheriff Braun said that both W. H. Coleman, United Mine Workers attorney, and D. M. Evans, coal company counsel, were busy on legal matters and wanted additional time.

The company won ejectment suits against the miners last week when the Superior Court decided in favor of the Pittsburgh Terminal and other coal companies, but only the Terminal company was represented at today's gathering. The miners are building barracks to house the strikers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The Labor Department is expected to act soon to aid miners and mine operators in settling the bituminous coal strike in West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania fields.

Secretary of Labor Davis, in the opinion of officials here today, will heed the plea of United Mine Workers' chiefs to call a conference as the only solution of the long controversy.

Don't Forget Books For Toy Mission

"Don't forget the Toy Mission accepts books. Persons who send donations through the SUN-TELE Auxiliary can make no better choice than volumes on travel, biography, history and children's stories," said George L. oBnd, chairman of the Mission today.

"Picture books from the 'A-B-C' prints to the advanced Mother Goose stories are especially desired, but at the same time we can make use of any good book that may be read by children up to 15 years of age. To find desirable toys for older children is not always an easy task, but there is no difficulty in selecting a good book. Wholesome stories of adventure are especially desired for our boys and they are always appreciated."

John E. Potter, who censors books for the Mission, says that he is getting many gifts of books this season, but more are wanted. Mr. Potter says there is no rule governing the giving of books except that they must be clean and deal with interesting subjects. The books are forwarded with toys from the various SUN-TELE Auxiliary stations.

Donations may be left with any Sun-Tele news agent, who will forward them promptly to the Toy Mission. A complete list of these agencies will be published in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Arthur Somers Roche Drama, "Fallen Angels," Will Offer Pauline Starke In Lead Role

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service,

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.

I JUST knew Pauline Starke's trick hair cut meant a new part in a picture. She appeared at Billie Dove's dinner dance with a very short, very trim and somewhat unique bob, so different that it attracted considerable attention. The character that apparently calls for this style of hairdress is in "Fallen Angels," and Arthur Somers Roche drama about to be filmed at Universal City.

This "Fallen Angels" has been talked of for at least six months. And now it is about to be made with Edward Laemmle handling it directorial destinies.

The surprise of "Fallen Angels" is that both Norman Kerry and Ward Crane have the important male roles. Their type is so similar and they look so much alike it is somewhat of an experiment to put them in the same film. Mr. Kerry's role is heroic. In fact, he kills himself so his rival can have the girl.

I wonder how Norman's public will enjoy seeing him die? He is extremely popular and fans may resent his sacrifice. At least, it is a new angle, isn't it?

They all come back. That is, if they care enough about pictures and the industry feels they are valuable. Here is Joseph Engle, at one time treasurer of Metro and chief of production in the days before Metro joined forces with Goldwyn and Louis B. Mayer. Mr. Engle has come to Hollywood to take over the management of Caddo Pictures—the place formerly held by Whitman Bennett, who returns to New York. Mr. Bennett, it seems, has another ace in the hole—another business venture that will be made public shortly. Caddo Pictures, in case you are troubled with a shortage of the memory, is the one headed by Howard Hughes, 22-year-old millionaire.

Sidney Olcott bade his friends farewell yesterday and set out to eat his Christmas dinner in Paris. It isn't just the thought of eating plum pudding with old friends in the French capital at this time that takes Sidney from our midst. It is a new contract to direct pictures for the British Lion Film Company. Since Parliament passed the film quota law, production in England has started to pick up. Several other directors are also talking shop. The British Lion is well financed, too, and headed by Sir Edward Wallace, considered one of the most capable motion picture men in all of England. Mr. Olcott is one of the pioneer directors and the man who made "Little Old New York," considered by many people as Marion Davies' finest picture.

Some of Lya De Putti's frineds in Hollywood have been much shocked to hear of a painful accident that befell her recently while she was making a picture in Berlin. She fell on some glass and cut both legs so severely that she had to be taken to a hospital for treatment. Naturally, the picture was held up. Miss De Putti, who speaks only a very few words of English, writes long letters in German to her foreign friends lamenting that Germany is not the same and that she is homesick for California. That is certainly a recommendation for filmland's capital.

You don't wonder the West Coast theaters elected Winfield Sheehan to the board of directors do you? In the last two years he has proved that he knows how to make good pictures. "Sunrise," a Fox film, is really an achievement. Of course, this hasn't everything to do with Mr. Sheehan's appointment. The thing that counts most is his business ability and he has plenty of this, as his friends and associates will testify.

Local Boy

FRANCIS J. FELTON

Mr. Felton who comes to the Davis next week with Adele Jason and Boys, educated in Bellevue High School and Allegheny College, is a son of F. J. Felton, official of the Pressed Steel Car Company. The family home is 59 Florence avenue, Bellevue. Francis Joseph has been on the stage one year.

STAGE AND FILMS NEXT WEEK

William Hodge, one of the most popular and successful stars on the American stage, comes to the Alvin for one week, beginning Monday evening, in his mystery comedy, "Straight Thru the Door." The regular days of matinees in the Alvin are Wednesday and Saturday.

Overtures have been made to John Golden to take the company now appearing in the Gladys Unger comedy, "2 Girls Wanted," and which is scheduled for appearance in the Nixon, beginning Monday, to London for a spring season in the English capital. Nydia Westman is featured in "2 Girls Wanted."

Alice Brady, in "The Ark," comes to the Pitt next week. "The Ark," to some extent, is an expose of the "inside stuff" of those who reap big financial benefits from their "hit the trail" oratory. This is a new play for Miss Brady and, following the Pittsburgh engagement, the show is scheduled for a New York opening.

The Keith-Albee vaudeville program, booked for the Davis next week, features Joe Frisco, dancing comedian. On the screen will be "The Last Waltz," from the Oscar Strauss operetta.

Ruth Elder, who is to appear in person in the Penn Theater for one week, beginning Monday, is the first of the flying celebrities to make a theatrical appearance.

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell head the cast of "Seventh Heaven," to be shown in the Grand next week.

Bobby Agnew plays his hundredth and fifth motion picture role as leading man in "The College Hero," in which he is featured with Pauline Garon and Ben Turpin. "The College Hero" comes to Loew's Aldine Monday.

"Dottie," a mystery act, is an added feature in "Sugar Babies," next week's show at the Academy. It is said to be an unusual novelty.

Stage Star

ALICE BRADY

Miss Brady, former screen star who has had great success on the stage, comes to the Pitt next week in a new play, "The Ark."

"PAL" MARRIAGE TO BE TOPIC OF SERMON

The much debated companionate marriage will be discussed in the sermon of the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Charles S. Poling. Dr. Shelton had engagements to speak in San Francisco and Alabama. "Two Good Old Friends" will be his subject tomorrow evening. "What Is the True Basis of Friendship?" "Can Bad People Be Friends?" and "Who Really Is Your Friend?" will be included in the questions which Dr. Shelton will answer. "The Good Things You Meant to Do" will be his morning subject.

A series of sermons on "The Christmas Hymns" will be begun tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomsen Kerr at the vesper service in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. His subject will be "The Benedictus." At the morning service Dr. Kerr will preach on "Their Backs Toward the Temple."

At the morning service tomorrow his subject will be "The Missionary Movement as It Looks on the Field." His evening topic will be "The Use of Reason in Religion."

The religious significance of the pre-Christmas period will be touched upon at the Salvation Army services tomorrow at headquarters and at all of the branches. "Fruitfulness" will be the topic of the sermon in the main auditorium at 11 a. m., and "The Ark of God" at 8 p. m., Evangelist W. C. Crouch being the speaker for both occasions. The Young People's services will be held at 6 p. m., in charge of Miss Gertrude Gilbert.

Payton, pastor, will speak both morning and evening. Addresses will be given by members of the congregation at a service beginning at 3 p. m.

The Crafton Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, originally the Wesley Chapel of West Pittsburgh, stood at the corner of Seventeenth street and Liberty avenue. PATRICIA PITT'S SOCIAL COMMENT

December Dates Filled With Gay Parties

FOR the girl who is in her first season in society, the hectic months of November and December are a round of gay parties, ranging from small, informal luncheons to balls. Most of their parents give both a coming-out tea and, later, a dance for them, but these are not all, by any means. Almost every day for more than a month there has been at least one debutante party, and the next few weeks will see many more.

Dates in early January are now being selected, the first one to be announced being January 7, taken by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Harden Church, of Wallingford street, for a dinner in honor of Mary Louise Johnson, debutante daughter of Mrs. William Terrell Johnson, of Forbes street. The dinner is to be given in the Pittsburgh Golf Club preceding the weekly dance.

Mary Louise is one of our most popular buds this season, and still another party is being arranged for her. This is also a dinner, to be given December 29 in the Golf Club by Mrs. Julian Burdick and her daughter, Frances, of Von Lent place.

Just last night another debutante party was given, with three of the season's buds as guests of honor. Mrs. Reuben Miller, Jr., was the hostess, giving a dinner dance in the Golf Club for Mary Mellon McClung, Anne King Scott and Juliet Lea Hillman. There were about 160 guests, including this season's debutantes, as well as last winter's, with an equal number of men. Chrysanthemums in the yellow and bronze shades decorated the tables, together with yellow candles in amber holders.

ON COMMITTEE TEA DANCE

Mrs. John A. Murtland is a member of the patroness committee for the Girl Scout tea dance to be held December 10 in the Hotel Schenley.

MRS. JOHN A. MURTLAND

Mr. Miller, by the way, landed yesterday in San Francisco, from Honolulu, where he has been spending a few weeks. He is expected home on Tuesday.

All our news seems to concern the debutantes today, but the fact remains that they are rather important socially just now. Two Sewickley debbies are to be entertained December 28, when the George Hubbard Clapps, of Edgeworth, will give a dinner in the Edgeworth Club for Elizabeth Rutan and Elizabeth George.

Speaking of the Clapps, their daughter, Katherine, whose engagement to William Ayres Galbraith, of Sewickley, was announced recently, is to be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given next Tuesday in the Allegheny Country Club by Mrs. William W. Collin, Jr., of Woodland road, Sewickley.

It is interesting to know that Frank Gilman Allen, lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, and his bride, the former Eleanor Hamilton Wallace, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cushing Wallace, of the North Side, were guests of President and Mrs. Coolidge Thursday night at a Cabinet dinner and will remain at the White House over the week end. Mr. Allen is an old friend of the Coolidges. You recall, of course, that the Wallace-Allen wedding took place last Saturday in the bride's home.

Still more children's parties are being arranged for the appearance of the French marionettes in "Uncle Wiggily in Wonderland" next Saturday afternoon in Carnegie Music Hall. Just the other day it was announced that several mothers are taking the opportunity to entertain small groups of children at the show, and it now appears that the list is growing. Among them are Mrs. William Gibson, Sr., Mrs. Grant McKinney, Mrs. Grant Curry, Mrs. Julian Kennedy, Jr., Mrs. Donald Scott Rodgers, Mrs. Malcolm Leech, Mrs. J. E. Lewis, Mrs. George Snow, Mrs. Harvey Childs, Mrs. S. Ruggles Henderson, Jr., Mrs. Eyvind M. Verner, Mrs. P. L. Logan, Mrs. James McNally and others.

SOCIETY PLANS TO HOLD 'FAIRLESS' FAIR

Elmer Kenyon, president of the Pittsburgh Drama League, will begin the December talks, speaking next Wednesday morning on the drama. The following week Mrs. W. H. Parrish will talk of her memory chain, the unusual chain of mementoes which she collected on her trip around the world. The society's "fairless fair" will be conducted after the luncheon, and on the following night a fairless fair dinner will be served and the church choir will give a concert. On December 21, "Milestones" will be read by Mrs. J. E. Webster, and Mrs. Rose Leader Chislett will give songs of the periods in the play, Mrs. David V. Murdoch accompanying her. The December luncheons are to be in charge of Mrs. Harold D. Fish.

Mrs. Ida Wright Bowman gave the second in the series of Friday Morning Club lectures yesterday morning in Carnegie Music Hall and the first in the quartet that will be her contribution to the season. "America is faced with two unknowns," the new Ford car and the President's mind," said this popular lecturer in beginning her talk. She then went on to a discussion of presidential timber and in reply to a query as to what was the most important question before the American people, said undoubtedly it was "who will be the next President?" Congress, Mrs. Bowman predicted, will be one long stump speech when it opens next week.

America is standing outside the world-organized effort to stop war, she said, in considering international questions, with particular reference to the Bryan-made treaty between America and France which is soon to expire. Mrs. Bowman drew a parallel between Great Britain and the United States, saying their problems are much the same. Both have coal problems, the United States has the Panama Canal, Britain the Suez, this country the Philippines, Britain India. Especial attention was paid by Mrs. Bowman to the coming sixth Panama-American conference in Cuba. The Chinese situation was also commented on.

JACK DEMPSEY

"THE LONG COUNT"—Jack Dempsey's Own Story

Begin It in the Sun-Tele Monday

The world has been waiting for the inside story of what happened during the seventh round of the return bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney at Chicago in September. Now Dempsey himself comes forward and tells in his own words and under his own signature his views of the mixup that deprived him of a chance to be the first former heavyweight champion to come back and regain his title from the man who defeated him.

Dempsey tells why he is convinced he was cheated of a knockout victory by the actions of the referee when he had Tunney on the floor for that long interval.

It's an absorbing narrative, told in six chapters beginning Monday and concluding next Saturday.

Begin the story at the beginning and you'll be sure to follow it through to the end.

WELCH ON HEARST ALL-AMERICA TEAM

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

EVEN though the Pittsburgh hockey club has limped off to the poorest start it ever made in a league race, losing its first five games and getting only a tie in the sixth encounter, it is evident that the heads of some of the other teams in the league believes there is some real winning material on the local roster. At any rate they are very eager to acquire some of it.

From a reliable source it is learned that while the Pirates were in New York for a game this week, the owners of the New York Americans approached the Pittsburgh management on the subject of purchasing some of the local material and made a big cash offer for three of the men in Odie Cleghorn's lineup.

IT IS understood that the men sought were Darragh, Milks and Worters. For this trio the Gotham magnates expressed a willingness to pay a fancy price in cash. The Americans themselves have not been going any too well, and the owners figured on reorganizing the team by buying players from other clubs.

Of course, the Pirate management refused to listen to the proposal. The owners of the Pittsburgh team may not be the oldest or most experienced in the circuit, but they know that they need new players of ability themselves instead of being in a a position to sell any capable men.

They realized that without Darragh, Milks and Worters there would not be enough class left on the Pittsburgh team to win games even in the weakest of leagues, so

Tex Won't Put Up Arena

By ED FRAYNE,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Three highlights stood out in the developments along the metropolitan mitt area yesterday.

Heading the list was a significant statement by Promoter George (Tex) Rickard that he has abandoned his plan for an outdoor boxing arena in New York. He cannot consider such a tremendous investment while Congress has a proposal for a 25 per cent tax on boxing before it, he said.

This means, Rickard said, that he will have to stage his big heavyweight championship contest somewhere else next year. It would be suicidal to attempt such a gigantic enterprise in a ball park, he added. He said:

"I will have to secure a stadium. However, if it so happens that Gene Tunney desires to defend his championship twice, I may stage the second bout in New York. He would have to meet different opponents, of course."

The other developments came in the form of two interesting matches, one being signed for Chicago, and the other for Madison Square Garden.

Jack Deleney, former light heavyweight champion, accepted the Chicago date. He signed articles to meet Paul Berlenbach there on December 9. The distance will be 10 rounds. Jim Mullen is the promoter.

The New York match involves Tony Canzoneri, the Brooklyn boy who defeated hard-hitting Ignatz Fernandez on Thursday night, and Bud Taylor, the recognized bantamweight champion.

Jess McMahon signed the pair to meet in a 10-round bout on the night of December 30.

LOCAL ACE HONORED BY 100 CRITICS

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

CAPT. GIBBY WELCH, stellar halfback of the University of Pittsburgh eleven, has gained a place on the outstanding all-America eleven of the season, the Hearst newspapers' consensus team, announced today.

This eleven was selected by a vote of more than 100 critics on Hearst newspapers and syndicates scattered throughout the country and of which group the Sun-Telegraph is a member. The critics covered every district in the land and their selections were gathered and merged to make a composite team. Second and third teams also were named, together with a comprehensive honorable mention list.

Although he was not permitted to finish the season because it was learned he had competed on the Brown freshman team before entering Yale, Bruce Caldwell, the Elis' triple-threat backfield star, was named as Welch's running mate at halfback, with Morley Drury, captain of the Southern California eleven, at quarterback and Joesting of Michigan at fullback, a sweet backfield, if it could be banded together to play on a single team.

KERN, AMOS NAMED

Oosterbaan of Michigan and Nash of the undefeated University of Georgia eleven, the only team to defeat Yale, are ranked as the leading ends of the year, with Hibbs of Southern California and Sprague of the Army at the tackles; Webster of Yale and Capt. Smith of Notre Dame at the guards and Bettencourt of St. Mary's of California at center.

Kern of Pitt is honored with a tackle berth and Bill Amos of W. & J. is named fullback on the second team, on which Presnell, the speedy Nebraska halfback, who starred against Pitt in the stadium, is at one of the halfback positions.

Raskowski of Ohio State is one of the tackles on the third team, of which Jap Douds, W. & J. guard, and Christy Flanagan, Notre Dame

THROUGH the SPORT LENS by HAVEY BOYLE

HAVEY BOYLE.

A PRELIMINARY professional boxer is somewhere between the ages of 18 and 28. Most of them are closer to 20 than to 25. They work, as a rule, at something besides boxing. They must work, because the income from their boxing is insufficient. The lowliest get $20 a bout and the worthiest of the preliminary boys sometimes get $100 or $150.

It is a peculiar economic scheme they work under—not dissimilar, perhaps, to the conditions as in the film business. The cost of a film is governed by the size of the theater, sometimes. A preliminary boxer's purse is governed by the nature of the club for which he shows. Often a preliminary boxer will get more at a large club for box-

Pfeil, Golf Leader, Dies

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 3.—Charles Oscar Pfeil, Memphis architect, for many years a leading executive in American amateur golf, nominee for the presidency of the United States Golf Association, died here last night following an extended illness.

The nomination to head the U. S. G. A., news of which reached him on what proved to be his deathbed, granted him the distinction of being the first Westerner to achieve this honor.

During 1927 he served as senior vice president of the U. S. G. A. for three years. Before that he was president of the Western Golf Association. At various times he had been an officer of the Southern, vice president of the Western and executive committeeman of the United States Golf Associations. He was largely credited with healing serious rifts between the Western and the American governing bodies of golf.

He was widely known for his amiable disposition on the links, not only as a player, but as a "galleryite," and virtually all important tournaments of the past 10 years found him closely following the play and encouraging the players.

He was born April 9, 1871, on a farm near Jacksonville, Ill. He was educated at Brown's College there, the Kansas State Agricultural College and the Illinois College of Architecture. He pursued his chosen profession in Peoria, Chicago and St. Louis before coming to Memphis in 1903.

Gene Analyzes Ring Ideas For Radio

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Gene Tunney turned psychologist for a few minutes last night and analyzed the sensations of a boxer entering the ring for a world championship fight. The titleholder addressed a radio audience, his talk being broadcast through the largest network of stations ever linked together for a regular weekly program. Tunney's talk formed a part of the first of a series of 52 weekly programs to be broadcast by a large national manufacturing concern.

Fear and worry knock out more challengers than the champions' fists.

The highly nervous temperamental type most often reaches the top in boxing.

75,000 to See School Game in Chicago

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—On Soldier Field, where many a strenuous argument has been contested, sometimes to a debatable decision, the public and Catholic high school champion football teams of Chicago were to decide the prep school gridiron supremacy today. Nearly 75,000 tickets were sold for the game, the proceeds of which will swell Christmas charity funds. It is the first time in Chicago's history that the two winning prep football teams of the two leagues have met in a post-season game for the real city title. The seat sale was believed to be the largest in the history of prep school competition in the country.

NOTES of the BOXERS

BATTLING LEVINSKY, former American light-heavyweight champion, will be unable to go through with his bout with Emmett Rocco of Ellwood City, in the main event at Motor Square Garden Monday night, because of a bad eye, and Marco Polo, McKees Rocks heavyweight, who was to box Kid Crutchfield in the semi-final, has been moved up to furnish the opposition for Rocco in the main event. Levinsky came to Pittsburgh today to satisfy the promoters and Boxing Commissioner Havey Boyle that the eye was in such condition as to prevent him from boxing at this time.

THE Goose Goslin Club of the Allegheny County League has signed Artie Hoffman, last year's most valuable player in that circuit, to play guard on this year's team, according to Manager Charley Paske.

Realizing they must strengthen their lineup if they hope to compete with such clubs as McKeesport Cyclers, Duquesne Lafayettes, Enoch Rauhs, Braddock American Legion and McKees Rocks Business men, Tommy Goslin, sponsor of the team, is sparing no expense in obtaining the best talent available.

Besides Hoffman, the Goslins will have Ammons, Ritzel, Rodgers and Bable of last year's aggregation. The Goslins' big need at the present time is a star center.

Any pivot star desiring a tryout with the Goslins is requested to report for practice at the South Side Market House.

ONE of the reasons for the good showing of St. Catherines in the P. & O. League to date is Buck Kinnee, who has been playing an important role for the Beechview passers.

St. Catherines struck a snag after defeating the Goldensons in the opening contest of the season, losing out to the Somermans in a one-sided game, but it was not due to Kinnee's work.

The Beechview passers garnered only three field goals against the Somermans, Kinnee being responsible for all of them.

THE Somermans have been dealt a tough blow due to the loss of Eddie Losman, star center of the club, who has won a regular berth on the Duquesne University varsity squad.

Eddie played in the Somermans' opening contest, but was ordered to quit the club by Chick Davies, Dukes' varsity mentor. The Somermans have signed Eddie Weinberger, former star of the McKeesport Alumni club, to fill Losman's shoes at center.

BILL GANTER has lined up a strong team to represent the Moon Klinzing Juniors on the floor this winter. Among the well-known South Hills stars on the roster are Dick Phillips, Ken Linsley, Bab Beisel, Gus Garnham, Pietsch, Kamhaly, Lachbaum, Haus and Ganter.

This team, named after the former star of the Pittsburgh Morrys, will meet the leading junior and boys' teams in the Greater Pittsburgh district this year at home and abroad.

No games are scheduled in the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League tonight.

W.-J. GRIDIRON CARD FULL

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 3—Washington and Jefferson's football schedule for 12 has been completed with the exception of one date and was made public yesterday by Graduate Manager William G. Theurer. The one open date is October 13, which will provide a contest in Washington with some college eleven from the tri-state district. Negotiations are pending with several institutions for this game.

The schedule follows the general line of games forecast since the close of the 1927 season and features the usual major games with Pitt, Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Lafayette, which have been annual fixtures for years. Bucknell is retained under the provisions of a two-year agreement which took the Presidents to Lewisburg last season. One new major team is added, Fordham being carded for a contest on October 27 at the Polo Grounds and providing a return of the Red and Black to the Metropolis after a year's hiatus.

September 29—Bethany at Washington.

October 6—Waynesburg at Washington.

October 13—Open at Washington.

October 20—Carnegie Tech at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh.

GRID CHAMPIONSHIPS AT STAKE TODAY

By JESS CARVER.

The intercollegiate football season for 1927 will have its practical ending today with the staging of two important contests, both far removed from this locality, but of enough interest and with class attending them to set up as worth while writing about.

One, between the undefeated Crackers of Georgia and the once defeated Golden Tornados of Georgia Tech, to be played at Atlanta, Ga., this afternoon, will have the championship of the Southern Conference riding on its outcome. Neither eleven has been beaten in the Conference, the Tornados stepping out of character to lose 19 to 6 to Notre Dame earlier in the season.

The second big game will bring U. S. C.'s Trojans, also beaten by Notre Dame and only last week, against the Huskies of Washington on the Pacific Coast, with a possible tie with Stanford and Idaho facing the Trojans if they can beat back the threat ever embodied in the northern eleven.

The Georgia-Georgia Tech game is perhaps the most important of the two, especially for Pittsburgh. Should Tech down the Crackers, then the lone opponent before Pitt's claim for national honors will have been removed. It will leave Pitt with the best record in the nation, undefeated and tied but once, to press its claims for the honors of the year. The Panthers have one more game to play, a post-season intersectional game in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena with Pop Warner's Stanford eleven, which will rule as Coast champs if U. S. C. is beaten today.

CRACKERS FAVORED

Odds on the Georgia-Tornado game favor the Crackers slightly. They came north and east early this season to defeat Yale, and have since whipped Alabama, Florida, Vanderbilt and Sewanee, among other strong teams. The team is a fast, hard hitting machine, noted for the number of its backfield combinations, which has earned for it the title of "the team with a thousand halfbacks."

Coach Howard Jones of U. S. C. has developed a better aerial defense than was exhibited by the westerners against Notre Dame last week in Chicago, and hopes that it will be the leading favorite in his team's success against Washington.

Washington will bring a line smashing offense to Los Angeles, one that will test the powerful Trojan line to the utmost.

BOXING NOTES

Hiltman of Philadelphia, featherweights, will meet in the main bout of a show at Youngstown, December 14.

Tony Canzoneri and Bud Taylor, bantamweight champion, have been matched for Madison Square Garden, New York, December 30. The winner will box Benny Bass for the title.

There is talk of a match between Jack Zivic and Ace Hudkins at Detroit shortly after Christmas.

Cuddy DeMarco lost the decision to Bucky Lawless of Auburn, N. Y., in 10 rounds at Erie last night. It was a rough tussle with DeMarco making a strong finish. Cuddy subbed for Bobby Tracey on short notice. The pair probably will be rematched for December 23.

Baseball Men Leave For Dallas Meet

By LARRY WOLTZ,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Baseball's advance guard to the National Association meeting in Dallas, Tex., departed from the loop yesterday in the person of Tom Hickey, long president of the American Association. Club owners in the Hickey circuit left their respective homes for Dallas during the day in order to reach the Texas city in time for the league meeting to be held there tomorrow. The National Association meeting (the minors) does not get under way until Tuesday. Hickey hopes to have his meeting over not later than Monday noon.

Other prominent baseball men will leave for the South today, tomorrow and Monday. Commissioner K. M. Landis, with his secretary, Leslie O'Connor, will be among those leaving tomorrow. The principal address at the association meeting will be delivered by the commissioner, who has ironed out many a wrinkle for the "little fellows." Mike Sexton of Rock Island, president of the National Association, also will go South tomorrow.

President E. S. Barnard of the American League returned from the Pittsburgh schedule meeting yesterday. He will not be here long, however. He, with Secretary Walter McNichols of the Cleveland club, will leave today at noon for the Dallas meeting. Barnard will return not later than next Friday to get things in shape for the American League meeting to be held in New York December 15.

Joe McCarthy, Cub manager, arrived this morning from his home in Buffalo. He was here only a couple of hours, leaving at 11 o'clock for the minor league meeting in Dallas. The latest addition to his outfield, Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, came over from his Michigan home for a brief conference with his new manager.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 3.—Charles H. Howe, of Beaver Falls, Pa., was yesterday elected captain of the Princeton football team for 1928, by the 22 men who received letters this fall.

Howe has for two years won his varsity "P" at center on the Tiger varsity. For his stellar work this fall he has been generally nominated for honorable mention in making up all-American teams.

GAMES TODAY.
WEST PENN CUP.
Leechburg Steels at Clan Grant (O'Connor).
Pittsburgh Rovers at Swissvale (Hamilton).
DISTRICT LEAGUE.
Central at Pittsburgh Celtics (Sherrard).
Turtle Creek Thistles at German Sport (Timmins).

WITH a number of West Penn cup games together with quite a bunch of interesting league games on the schedule, local soccer fans have an interesting soccer card offered to them today for their afternoon sport. The feature game of the whole seems to be the fourth meeting of the Swissvale and Pittsburgh Rover outfits at the Swissvale grounds in the Western Pennsylvania championship race.

The Rovers and Swissvale are about as equally balanced in the matter of playing strength as it would be possible to find two clubs. Both teams have a scintillating front line and can get goals, and also sport a defense that looks real good on the season's form.

Each meeting found one team winning by the odd goal and today's game should not be any different to the rest. Stark is going to have a handful taking care of Trysull Evans, the Rovers' center forward, for the red headed speed merchant has about made that "Strip" line.

Leechburg Steel will travel to Donora to meet Clan Grant, and will probably suffer the same fate as other clubs that met the Grant boys on the side of the Monongahela River. This is also a cup tie battle. In the District League two games will be played, but there is nothing exciting about either of them. Central A. C. will play the Pittsburgh Celtics and Jimmie Sherrard will referee.

The other game will bring together the German Sport "B" team opposed to the Turtle Creek Thistles. This should be an easy victory for the Valley boys unless something radical happens.

TUNNEY

tering the ring for a championship fight is to regard it as just an ordinary bout.

Realize that your opponent is a human being like yourself and like yourself has but two fists.

This was the gist of Tunney's psycho-analysis. Let the champion speak for himself.

"I have been asked by a number of friends, 'Gene, what is the condition of your nerves before a big contest such as the heavyweight championship of last September?'

"I must state that a man entering a contest similar to the last two heavyweight championships has something to think about, for he is usually about to face a crisis in his life upon which hinges many things of public as well as private importance.

"The mental makeup of boxers varies as do their tastes. The dull phlegmatic type is very rarely given to nervousness. One would think this the ideal type for a boxing champion. Curiously enough it is usually the highly nervous, temperamental type that reaches the top.

"Men of great imagination, through long training, often get control of their mental process to such an extent as not to permit their thoughts to dwell on the contest at all.

"This is the state of mind I brought myself around to before the contest of September, 1926, when I was the challenger."

FOUR HOCKEY DUELS ON TONIGHT

The New York Rangers, leaders in the American Section, and the Montreal Maroons, Canadian Section pace setters, will hold the spotlight as eight National Hockey League sextets swing into action tonight. The Rangers are to oppose the Blackhawks at Chicago and the Maroons battle the St. Pats at Toronto. Both leaders, meeting opponents comparatively weak, should add to their advantages in the league standing.

In other games tonight the New York Americans are guests of the Canadiens at Montreal, and the Boston Bruins, stung by an 0-0 tie with the Pirates here Thursday night, will invade the domain of the champion Ottawa Senators.

The Rangers, who are to clash with the Pirates here Tuesday, will play their second engagement in as many days at Detroit Sunday night.

SPORT COMMENT

they promptly turned down the offer and informed the New York moguls that they were out to buy players, instead of selling them.

THEY are starting the annual winter baseball pastime of picking the man who will eventually take Connie Mack's place as manager of the Philadelphia Americans.

Now it is Eddie Collins. It is well known that the new owners of the Cleveland club approached Mack with the proposal that he turn Collins over to them in order that Eddie might be made manager of the Indians, but that Mack informed them he desired to retain the veteran keystone sacker.

NOW it is announced that Collins will remain as first lieutenant to Mack, besides playing second base occasionally when his legs permit, and Eastern scribes are guessing that it is Connie's intention to turn the managerial reins over to Eddie eventually.

They've been guessing about Mack's retirement for quite a few years, but Connie is still on the managerial job and it is doubtful if he has any intention of giving up the directing role which he first assumed when he supplanted Al Buckenberger as manager of the Pittsburgh club on September 3, 1894.

THERE is one thing that must be said for Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants. He surely is outspoken. No matter what ground there may be for the faults that his critics find in him, he must be given credit for being willing to speak his mind on any subject. He does not hesitate to express his views on matters such as trades made by other clubs, on which some managers hem and haw and decline to be quoted publicly for fear of offending some one involved in the deal.

For instance, McGraw has come right bluntly with the statement that in his opinion Pittsburgh got all the better of the Cuyler-Adams-Scott deal with Chicago. He says Adams is a fine ball player and that Pittsburgh is the gainer in the swap because it has obtained in Sparky just the kind of player needed to bolster it in the one position that needed bracing.

MANAGER McGRAW also expresses very frankly his opinion of the value of some players mentioned in other proposed deals.

When he was asked about a report from St. Louis that he had consented to trade Lindstrom and Barnes for Bell and Rhem," he said:

"Nothing to that story. I wouldn't take a ball park full of Bells for Lindstrom because I do not regard Bell as a good ball player. As for St. Louis letting Rhem come to the Giants there's not a chance.

"In a general way I am ready to talk trade with anybody if I can make the Giants stronger by trading. I am not standing pat. That would be foolish.

"As for Ty Cobb, I am going to talk about him, and perhaps about Tris Speaker, too, with Mr. Stoneham some time this week."

C.M.C.-Ryans Battle Here

By TOM BIRKS.

THE biggest day of the 1927 independent football season!

That is what may be said of the program on the sandlot gridirons of the section today, when three banner attractions will be served the fans who have been following the fortunes of the sandlotters this fall. The McKeesport Olympic-Carrick Odds contest at McKeesport; the Ryan-North Side C. M. C. battle on Duquesne University's grounds and the Dan Burns-Springdale Amicus struggle at New Kensington are the frays that will thrill the folks this afternoon.

Keeping the best until the last fits the situation fully, for it would be impossible to name the outstanding game of the day. Each team is battling for its right to stay in that elimination championship with the exception of Springdale Amicus, and Max Rosskamp's gridders will be battling just as hard to pull the Burns outfit into the "also-ran" class where they have been since the East Pittsburgh game.

However, the last two days nearly found the Parnassus classic being called off. While nothing was said in the contract regarding the eligibility rules for the game, Joe Tobin stated yesterday that reliable information was going around to the effect that quite a number of stars were going to be in the Amicus lineup. However, Max Rosskamp is too good a sport to play anything but the lineup that appeared in the Millvale, Oakmont and McChesneytown games with the exception of Brumbaugh. With the original Amicus lineup ready for the game, a wonderful crowd should be on hand.

ODDS ARE HOPEFUL

McKeesport fans are in a frenzy over the Cycler Park battle today. Freddy Iverson feels that the Olympics can beat any gridiron aggregation in the district with Fritz Quinn in form. Buck Weaver does not think so and openly stated that the Carrick stars will be very much in the battle for the championship when today's game is over. Last Saturday's battle was a thriller and fans following the fortunes of the Olympics predict a record-breaking crowd to watch the battle when the teams swing into action.

At Duquesne University field Ryans and C. M. C. will fight it out in another elimination battle. "Sonny" O'Neil will play, according to Manager Mathos last evening, and this is good news for the Hazelwood fans. But this is going to be a fight. Belack leads a line that the North Siders feel will block all the efforts of that crack Ryan backfield to advance the ball.

And Father Sullivan is banking heavily on Mert Caye, Stevo and Leahy to make scoring more than a possibility. Both managers last evening went on record in saying that no padding is going to be indulged in. Both clubs will take the field with the lineups that carried through this championship race.

There are the games today fans, take your choice. And without a doubt three great battles will exist and before nightfall three of the leading gridiron aggregations of the district will have passed out of the picture for this season.

KECK

halfback, also are members. Post, guard of the Pop Warner's Leland Stanford University eleven of California, which will oppose Pitt in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, Cal., January 2, also is a member of the third team.

Pittsburgh district men named for honorable mention are:

Lesko, Penn State, and Donchess, Pitt, ends; Darragh, Penn State, guard; Cutler, Pitt, center; Roepke, Penn State; Hagan, Pitt, and Eby, Ohio State, halfbacks, and Booth, Pitt, fullback.

WITTMER HONORED

Ed Wittmer, North Side lad, who starred at Princeton, and Harry Wilson, of Sharon, Army captain, are named among the halfbacks in the honorable mention list. Hoffman, the Stanford fullback, and Howell, the Nebraska fullback, also are honored, along with Randels, the Nebraska tackle.

Yale and Southern California, which lost a week ago to Notre Dame, at Chicago, 7-6, lead in placing players on the first team, each having two selections. Pitt, Michigan, Minnesota, St. Mary's, Georgia, Army and Notre Dame have one each. The East has four men on the team, the Middle West and Far West three each and the South one.

The list of leading players for the season is one of the most comprehensive ever compiled and in the absence of an "official" eleven since the death of Walter Camp, developer of the all-America idea, it takes rank, because of the manner in which it was assembled, as the most representative compilation of them all.

SPORT LENS

ing a certain boy than he will get at a smaller club for boxing the same boy.

PRELIMINARY boxers get little attention in the public press because of the larger fish in the pugilistic stream. But they are not without their prestige. At their places of regular employment the fact that they are fighters gives them an importance among fellow-employes, and "around the corner" where they loaf at night they are looked upon as something unusual.

Sometimes you might think that that badge of their profession—cauliflower ear, an ear which resembles a crushed rose more than the plant after which it is named—might bother them, but a few of the boys are just a little proud of that outward mark, as it tells the passing world that here is a fighter.

ALL boxers, of course, must go through the preliminary ranks to attain greatness. It is the history of boxing that the topnotchers linger only a short time in the preliminaries. Especially, in this day when good men are not plentiful any preliminary boy of worth soon rises above his fellows to bask in the main bout spot. Some boys spend their whole careers, and fairly long ones, without ever getting beyond the semi-final stage. In small clubs, sometimes, they breathe of the atmosphere of main bout, but the main bout at some small clubs would be just a preliminary at a big boxing club.

SOMETIMES they help themselves along by acting as sales agents for the club on whose program they are to appear. Many boys have earned bouts more through their ability to give friends a good sales talk on the value of the coming attraction than on any great boxing ability they possess. It is not uncommon for some of them to sell 20 or 25 tickets at their place of employment or in their neighborhood.

IN general cases their schooling is deficient. Stress of economic pressure has catapulted them out of the classroom into the lines of manual labor at an early age. Others, owing to the tradition in their sections, which is that boys ought not go to school after they reach the long-pants age, leave school even if their parents can afford the luxury of education up to the high school stage.

But, in a rough old business, and owning a militant nature, or at least a nature that will not walk away from a fight, these boys are astoundingly polite, reticent and attentive to authority. There are exceptions, but here the class as a whole is viewed.

AFTER a time money-values grow important, but there are long stretches in their career when boxing to these boys in the preliminary ranks is fun. The thrill of climbing into a white ring, flooded with lights; the satisfaction to the ego coming from hearing a stentorian announcer calling out the name; the wave of a friend in the audience as the boys look out from the ring, and the general ceremony preceding a bout all have their appeal.

QUEER old attitudes crop out in unusual cases. I know of a preliminary boy who apparently has been tortured by the thought that contemporaries and fans, and I believe correctly, have pronounced him as lacking what they string tennis rackets with.

Do you know how once he tried to erase this impression which must give him many a bad moment in those intervals that he is given to introspection? Well, he has evolved the idea of meeting a boy he fears not, and proceeding needlessly to take a lot of punching. Sometimes, when not hurt he falls down and plays unconscious until the referee counts nine. Then he gets up and puts up a merry fight. Later he goes down again, hears the count and gets up again. All this to impress the audience and to convert skeptics that here is a boy, who out on his feet, down several times for the count of nine, still has the old spirit to get up and carry on like the courageous hero of ring tradition.

His trouble is he is not sound in his histrionics. Thespis, when passing out his favors, overlooked this boy. With the result that his scheme is seen through easily. It is not important, but to boxing men somewhat interesting. There are boys who purposely lose to make the other boy look good but this is a new branch of the pugilistic tree who goes down for a count—not to lose as his primary purpose—but to appear as a giant of courage.

Georgie Visits Brooks in His Studio; He Asks Impossible Things

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ann and Georgie Hastings, sisters, live together in Mrs. O'Leary's boarding house. Ann, the elder, works in a factory and Georgie in an insurance office. Ann is proud of her sister's good looks and charming manners and pleads with her to accept the attentions of Bill Warren, who is madly in love with her, and to have nothing more to do with Ernest Brooks, a chance acquaintance who has been rushing her. Bill makes a confidant of Ann and proposes to Georgie, who refuses him. Ann's solicitude for her sister ends in a quarrel between the two, and Ann becomes conscious that she herself is fond of Bill, and the day after the quarrel he asks her to have lunch with him. During lunch he shows he is still devoted to Georgie, and Ann asks him why he doesn't call on her sister that evening. Bill comes to the boarding house and after waiting for Georgie sees her arrive with Ernest. Georgie vindictively tells Bill she doesn't care if she never sees him again, and in desperation he turns to Ann and asks her if she would be willing to go out with him now and then. Ann discovers that Bill has been drinking and shows her great disappointment in him, but resolves to do all she can to help him. Meanwhile Georgie, in a spirit of adventure, goes to call on Ernest in his studio.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

THE tired, flippant man she knew had disappeared: this was a stranger, an uncomfortable stranger.

He drew her close and closer. Then all at once unexpectedly, just as she was finding the strength to resist him, he released her.

"Sit down there, Georgie, I want to talk to you."

She obeyed him. She felt that she liked obeying him somehow. He drew up a three-legged stool.

"See here, you know I like you, don't you?"

"Why—"

"Oh, please, let's be honest now for a change. Of course you do."

"Yes," she whispered faintly.

"Well, I like you a lot. I'd like to take you away from this town—take you to Italy. You could go to Venice, Rome—though those places don't interest me any more. In the end we'd get up in the hills—you can't imagine what it's like. Six months there together. What do you say?"

"I don't understand you," Georgie said again, and this time her whisper was fainter still.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Listen, I forgive you a lot, when I realize it isn't your fault entirely. It's that sisters of yours, preaching about the wrath to come. She's scared the sense out of you."

"No, it isn't Ann, and you haven't any right to say anything against her," Georgie protested, her loyalty coming to the fore.

"Well, what is it then?"

"Because I couldn't do a thing like that. I'm not that kind. I don't see how you could think I was."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean going out there like that with you—and—and not marrying you."

"Did I say anything about not marrying you?"

Georgie's eyes opened widely. "You mean, you were just proposing to me?"

"I suppose you'd call it that."

His mouth looked bitter and unhappy, his face handsome and interesting. Georgie had the feeling that she was really alive, that things were really happening to her, experiences and colorful adventures. She wondered why she was not more moved.

Then the next moment he had gotten to his feet, drawn her to hers, put his arms around her, kissed her. His kiss was long and ardent, it made her senses swirl. Her eyes veiled a little and she drew off looking at him, trying to get command of herself.

"Don't you love me?" he demanded.

"I—I don't know. Yes, yes I guess I must."

"Why aren't you sure?"

"Because you don't really like me, or—or respect me at all."

"I don't know what you mean by respect. I think you're the prettiest and loveliest thing I've ever seen, and I couldn't respect anything more than that. If you mean your character or your brain, I'm not even thinking about them. I'm thinking about your body and your face."

"And you—you really want to marry me?"

"I said so, didn't I?"

Georgie's glance swept around the bare walls of the studio once more, passed along the canvases with their frames to the wall, to the palette with its scars of crimson and green, the tall easel, the tattered shade that hung over the skylight.

There was nothing luxurious to be seen. Probably Ernest Brooks wasn't half as well off as he pretended to be. Probably he spent money lavishly in restaurants and theaters, and let bills and obligations go where they wished.

But to be an artist's wife, to meet interesting people, to live in a whirl of excitement and strangeness—that was something. It was much.

"I don't know what to say," she faltered.

"Don't you love me?"

"Not yet."

He laughed suddenly. "I'll make you love me. You'll be astonished how much! And we'll go to Italy next month—next week, if necessary. But there's one condition."

"What's that?"

"I want to shock your sister. And I want to test you. You and I will go to Italy and marry after we get there."

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say. I want your sister to revel in moral platitudes. And I want to test how much you like me. If you'll do that, we'll start—whenever you say."

"But—but that's impossible."

"Think it over—let me know tomorrow," he answered coolly.

She was moving towards the door. He wasn't trying to stop her. The Japanese servant let her out in silence.

CHAPTER XV.

SHE got to Mrs. Leary's boarding house quite late, and was astonished to find Ann herself not yet there. She sat up for a while, thinking about her strange experience and the strange offer that had been made to her.

Why did Ernest Brooks want to wound Ann, why did he want to test her? But there were so many inexplicable things about him! After all, she decided, he was a genius, and you couldn't explain geniuses, you just had to take them for granted.

She was asleep before Ann arrived, and the next morning she was so full of her adventure that she did not even question her sister as to what had kept her out. Perhaps that was just as well.

It was one of Georgie's principles to put everything off until the last minute. If it were not settled then, the best thing to do was to follow the first impulse. And usually it was settled then.

In the morning she went to the office in the same confused mood, and so far from having reached any decision, she was still troubled tremendously by the offer itself.

But working in the cool, clear day, with a cool, clear brain, she was able to look more dispassionately on the scene of yesterday afternoon, when, with the aid of two cocktails and an insinuating atmosphere, she had been able to escape completely from the workaday world.

What Ernest Brooks proposed was impossible. Impossible because she didn't really love him. That was the final word, the true understanding. It was Ernest Brooks that troubled her, not his offer. Ann thoughts he was a child, did she? Ah, if she could only imagine her now, reasoning calmly, lucidly!

No, she didn't really love Ernest Brooks, she was just fascinated by him, and that was a different thing. Because you could always resist mere fascination—when you were in your right senses.

She decided to write him a letter, a clever letter that would startle him, make him realize what he had lost. But when she had put a sheet of paper in her machine, the clever phrases woudn't come. She stuck on doggedly to the end, however, read what she had written, and tore it up in dejection.

It wasn't going away with him and marrying him afterwards that bothered her, she decided, it was just marrying him at all, living with him at all, that was so unsatisfying.

He wasn't the kind of man she wanted to marry really. The kind of man she wanted to marry was a man who. . . but she couldn't decide just what kind of man that was.

Thinking it over during the morning, she decided that the only way to tell him would be over the 'phone. During her lunch hour she went into a booth in a drug store, called his number and then all at once hung up. What was the matter with her anyway? Was she afraid? Afraid, nonsense! She called up once more.

The Jap answered in faulty but understandable English. Mr. Brooks wasn't there; could he take a message?

"Just tell him that Georgie . . . that Georgie is unable to accept his kind invitation."

She laughed, and decided that she had been very clever. But going back to the office she felt less sure, and her uncertainty deepened during the afternoon.

The Jap would be sure to get the message all wrong, or else he would fail to deliver it. Or something else might happen.

Why not see Ernest again? Tell him the truth to his face, coolly and pleasantly, and go away, smiling, with another adventure kicked off in the files of memory?

That idea was more impulse than anything else, but unlike many of Georgie's impulses, it endured.

As soon as her work was done, she hurried out and made her way to the studio apartment. This time there was no waiting taxicab to carry her. She took a street car, and walked afterwards.

Going up in the elevator, she felt again a little uncertain. But she would not allow herself to falter.

If the Jap had any expression at all, she would have said it was surprise. Indeed he opened the door very slowly and glanced behind him as if inquiringly.

She stepped into the corridor, moved towards the studio. Then she felt uncomfortable and wished, too late, that she hadn't come.

For though Ernest Brooks was there, a woman was there also, a woman in smart, simple clothes with a hat that spoke of associations with a French millinery shop, and a face that told of snobbishness, good-living, and nothing to do except hunt for amusement.

Brooks calmly introduced her as Mrs. Mountford, and Mrs.

Gossip Stirs Hollywood

JEAN WILLIAMS

Chief among Hollywood studio gossip, of which there is plenty, today comes the story of Jean Williams. For week upon week, Miss Williams, a beauty fresh from the "Follies," trod her way from studio to studio. Always she met with curt refusal, "No work today." So she changed her name to "Sonia Karlow, adopted intriguing, if dubious, accent and started the search all over. It "clicked." In fact, so well, that yesterday she signed a contracted with—

CECIL B. DeMILLE,

Who previously had refused her work a dozen times or more. She couldn't keep up the deception, however, and confessed. DeMille says the contract stands. And then there is—

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

Just back from Scotland and while not looking for a husband certainly is at least available for matrimony. While she was abroad, Connie disposed of one

ALASTAIR MacINTOSH,

The Scottish captain-husband, via the divorce route. MacIntosh is silent on the outcome of what was once looked on by the film colony as an ideal match and Connie, when questioned as to his successor, if any, is also more than reticent—

MABEL NORMAND,

She of many escapades, entirely recovered from her recent illness, is back in Hollywood, too. She has been in the middle west, where her husband,

LEW CODY,

Is doing vaudeville. Miss Normand vigorously denied a marital rift. "Lew will be home for Christmas," she said. "Then we will live in his house and not keep two establishments as we have been doing."

Girl Lures Victims Into Bandit Trap; Trio Robbed

Two Beaten, Hurled to Street From Auto

A gang of automobile bandits, including a young woman, who lured the gang's victims to within striking distance of her companions, early today staged three holdups in the East End section. Two of the victims were beaten up.

The young woman was addressed as "Gert" by one of her companions, according to William Edwards, of 211 North Graham street, who was beaten by the men at Friendship and Aiken avenues about 2 o'clock this morning. Edwards was talking with Fred Rotzell, of 204 South Euclid avenue when the machine stopped at the intersection and the girl called to the pair. The two started for the automobile, but Rozell, suspecting danger, turned and ran.

DRAGGED INTO MACHINE.

Edwards was dragged into the machine by the woman's three companions, struck on the head and beaten about the body.

After being robbed of a diamond stickpin and a gold watch he was thrown into the street. The loot was valued at about $200. Rotzell picked up his friend and assisted him home.

The second robbery occurred within a few minutes of the first. The bandit machine drove up to the curb in Negley avenue near Penn avenue and two of the robbers stepped to the street with revolvers and ordered E. R. Pool, of 207 Negley avenue, to get into the machine. Pool was forced into the rear of the car and was robbed of his topcoat, his watch, a wallet containing $6, a small amount of change and several other pocket articles. The woman and another man were seated in the front of the machine.

After taking the money from the wallet, one of the holdup men returned the wallet and ordered the driver to start the machine. Pool was ordered from the automobile at Morningside avenue near Chislett street. He described the robbers as being all young men, one of them visibly under the influence of liquor.

CALLS THIRD VICTIM.

The woman member of the gang again acted as the lure in calling W. R. Brown, of 5549 Forbes street, to the side of the machine when the car stopped at Shady avenue and Forbes street. Brown was dragged into the car, hit on the head and robbed of his overcoat and scarf, a small amount of money and his watch, which he valued at $30. He was forced to remain in the machine until it reached Tilbury street, Squirrel Hill, when he was pushed to the street.

OTHER 4S' STOCKS SLUMP

By EDWIN J. CLAPP
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3. — At the close of the stock market yesterday, it was profitable to glance at the effect on motor shares produced by this "Ford Week" in Wall Street.

The new Ford car will be in direct competition with a group of 4-cylinder cars and in indirect competition with the cheaper sixes. The comparative prices are:

FOURS.

Car.	F.O.B. Factory.
Ford	[illegible]
Chevrolet (General Motors)	[illegible]
Chrysler 52	[illegible]
Dodge 124	[illegible]
Overland, Whippet (Willys-Overland)	[illegible]
Star (Durant Motors)	[illegible]
SIXES.
Essex (Hudson Motors)	[illegible]
Pontiac (General Motors)	[illegible]
Nash	[illegible]
Erskine	[illegible]

Every one of the companies making fours is off with the exception of Chrysler, which shows no change for the week. Dodge is off two points; Willys-Overland is off two points, and Durant Motors is off 1¾ points.

The probable explanation for Chrysler being unaffected is that less than a third of its business is fours. That it held up is less remarkable than General Motors, which is turning out a million Chevrolet fours for the year, two-thirds of its total production.

Ford in 1927 is selling a million cars less than he did in 1925; General Motors is selling a million more, mainly Chevrolets.

Among the above-mentioned makers of low-priced sixes, Studebaker actually advanced for the week, the stock rising from 57 to 57½, and Nash leaped forward from 80¼ to 82. Only Hudson Motors declined, from 70⅛ to 67⅝.

The reason for Hudson's decline is perhaps that it sells three Essex cars for each Hudson. On the other hand the Nash low-priced model, quoted above, is only 40 per cent of the company's output, and the Erskine is still a baby in the Studebaker family, which is making money out of record-breaking sales of the Commander and President lines.

Ford of Canada on the Curb skyrocketed from $594 on last Saturday to $675 at the close tonight, an advance of 81 points.

The place of Ford in the 1928 motor industry will depend upon unknown factors: The total business and the proportion he gets of it.

Belief in a large volume of deferred buying for new cars and renewals makes optimistic estimates of the country's 1928 production run as high as 5,000,000 new cars and trucks.

GO FOR BUFFALO MONDAY

A caravan of 16 motor trucks will leave for the Trexler Game Preserve at Schnecksville, Monday morning to get the first allotment of 16 buffaloes purchased by the county for the two new county parks. The route will be over the William Penn Highway and will take about four days. The buffaloes will be placed in North Park.

HOMEWOOD OIL AND GAS COMPANY IS DISSOLVED

A decree was signed by Judge Thomas J. Ford dissolving the Homewood Oil and Gas Company. Application for dissolution of the Rees Lumber Company also was made before the same jurist.

MADE "SPECIAL" LAWYER

WILLIAM FRANK BERGER

The chief clerk of Orphans Court has been admitted without examination to practice as a lawyer in that court, as a reward for his 35 year's service in county offices. The appointment, under a layman's certificate, is the second of its kind in the history of the court.

69,500 VIEW NEW FORDS

With the closing of the first day of the public exhibition of the new Ford automobiles in Motor Square Garden last night at 11 o'clock, checkers at the garden announced that 69,500 persons had passed through the doors. Eighteen policemen under the direction of Lieut. John A. Jones handled the crowds that started when the doors opened at 9 a. m. The exhibit will close tonight.

TO SCAN COUNTY BOOK SYSTEM

A survey with the view of installing a new county bookkeeping system has been begun by Controller-elect Robert G. Woodside, it became known this morning. Woodside has retained Rush & McGonigle, auditors, whose system now in use in the city controller's office has the approval of the Bureau of Municipal Research, New York, to make the survey.

The auditors and Woodside conferred yesterday with Controller C. C. McGovern and County Treasurer-elect John Francies.

Woodside's $50,000 bond, with the Commercial Casualty Insurance Company, has been approved by Judge Thomas J. Ford of Common Pleas Court.

Definition of Chaperon

THE word chaperon is not feminine, although it is generally applied to a woman. It means a hood, and when used metaphorically signifies that the married woman shields her youthful protege as the hood shields the face.

Georgie Visits Brooks in His Studio; He Asks Impossible Things

Mountford with a faintly cryptic smile seemed to sum up Georgie and cast her aside all in the same glance.

"I—I called you up," Georgie said awkwardly. "I don't know whether you got my message."

"Oh, I did. That's why I'm a little surprised at seeing you here."

He said something to Mrs. Mountford in a low voice, and she went into a peal of laughter.

He was showing her his paintings apparently, holding up for her inspection one canvas after another. She had lighted a cigaret, and with her head on one side, was regarding with critical, intelligent eyes the things he showed her.

What keen things she was saying! How bored her comments were!

"Now that one I call rotten. You must have painted it when you were drunk, poor Ernest . . . Oh, there, that's much better . . . the composition's unique and the color's quite interesting . . ."

Georgie sat tongue-tied, wondering why she had come, wishing she could seize some pretext to slip away. Only now that she was here, she had to stay.

And the worst of it was that Ernest was ignoring her. His smiles, his low comments, were exclusively for Mrs. Mountford. It was as if Georgie weren't even in the room!

Mrs. Mountford . . . handsome yes, with her dark eyes and red, red mouth. But she was ten years older than Georgie if she were a day. But Ernest was flirting with her as he knew her to flirt. His hand took her arm, he bent towards her.

A choking sensation came into Georgie's throat. She felt furious and unhappy.

She knew the color had left her face. She felt she was no longer pretty. And he was ignoring her, showing this woman here that he was ignoring her. He was insulting her!

She watched him, leaning close to Mrs. Mountford at the other end of the studio. Mrs. Mountford drew away and looked at him with dancing eyes, full of mock protest.

Then Georgie felt that until this moment she had never been unhappy in all her life before. She wanted to sob, she was so miserable, and yet she was not quite sure why she was miserable.

Not hurt vanity, no it wasn't that. It must be only that she really loved him, and had not known it till now when he had made her jealous.

She sat without moving, white as a statue. Then she heard Mrs. Mountford murmur a vague goodby, saw her go out.

CHAPTER XVI.

GEORGIE was alone with Ernest. Mrs. Mountford, in her slinky, black, expensive clothing, her elaborate make-up, her supercilious air of contempt and patronage had vanished.

Now Ernest was back, looking down at her, darkly, terrible, silent, making her breathe harder and faster by the intent criticism of his look.

"Well," he asked at last. "What did you want to see me about?"

Tears sprang into Georgie's eyes. An hour ago even, she could have resented that speech and that tone. But now the confidence had been shaken out of her by seeing him so cool, by watching him with this woman of the world with her air of culture, of smart finishing schools, and being used to money and all that money could buy.

"I wasn't sure that you got my message," she faltered.

"Oh, I got it all right," he said harshly. "I won't say I wasn't surprised."

"I—I thought I ought to explain," she stammered.

"What is there to say?"

"Lots and lots—if you only listen. You see, I wasn't afraid of going away with you. I really wasn't."

"No?"

"Oh, you don't need to believe me if you don't want to. But I'm trying to tell you the truth. I wouldn't dream of going away with you because—because I don't love you."

He laughed shortly. "And you came around to tell me that? Why, if you didn't love me a little, you wouldn't have come around at all!"

"But I don't—I really don't love you!"

His eyes were dark and blazing now. He caught her suddenly, in the impetuous way he had, and she had no strength to resist him. As he kissed her again and again, it seemed that all the will went out of her.

"Oh, stop, stop!" she whispered. "I don't love you—I really don't. Besides, you love that woman who was here today. It's no use telling me you don't. I could see that from the way you looked at her."

"Georgie," he pleaded, "don't be a fool, come away with me! I love you and want you. What else can I say? What else matters? You hurt me a lot more than you know by being suspicious of me, not trusting me. You didn't even give me a chance. I tell you you're worth a million Mrs. Mountfords. Georgie, you've got to come with me. I'll make you happy—you'll have a time you never even dreamed about."

"But why won't you marry me right away?" she asked. "I'll go if you'll do that—I really will."

He released her abruptly, stared at her with moody, almost angry eyes.

"You haven't much of a soul after all, have you?" he demanded. "You're just the average, scheming girl, who's on the make, first and last. Well, one thing is settled. Unless you go with me freely, you won't go with me at all! I'm going to test you with that, do you understand? I'm going to give you your chance to believe me or not, just as you like. But if you're suspicious of me, I don't even want you."

He had spoken with heat, and somehow his sincerity seemed undoubted. Georgie, looking at him humbly, felt she deserved his scorn. She was confused about his motives, she couldn't understand them, but then there were so many things about Ernest Brooks that she couldn't understand.

After all, he was different, he was an artist, and artists live differently, thought differently, from most other people.

"But you're being unfair to me," she protested now. "You're not being kind or understanding or anything. You try to force me and threaten me right away. How do I know if I love you? You're terribly attractive to me, but that isn't the same as love, is it?"

"It's what I call love," he said at that. "You're terribly attractive to me, Georgie. Why, that very first day when I saw you standing in the crowd waiting for the trolley—do you remember—?"

She nodded. "Of course I remember."

"Well, there was something different about you then, about the way you looked even. If you think I go around picking up girls, you've got another guess coming. I picked up you, because I thought you had real stuff. But the way you're treating me now makes me think you're just like the rest."

Then all at once he pushed her down into the deep wing chair, and bent over her, touching her hair with fingers that seemed as sensitive as a woman's. Her head was turned from him. She was staring into a mirror. But he was staring into it also. Their glance met there, while his voice, low, persuasive, and vibrant, wooed her. It seemed to belie his cool eyes, the angles of his face with its hard mouth and cynical, tired air.

It was like music, listening to that voice, Georgie thought, it was like being carried along drowsily on a sleepy river, without caring where she went or how.

Then she thought of all the boys and men she had known. The thought of Bill Warren, with his matter-of-fact ways, his kidding that passed for humor, his insistence on telling her about himself and how rich and successful he was going to be.

She thought of the bewildered look he had when she was angry. Why, he was just a boy, and most men were just boys, compared to this man who was talking to her now!

Did she love Ernest Brooks? She must, for how could she help it? Ann hadn't understood him, few people could understand him. But he had recognized in her a kindred spirit. Perhaps like him she was an artist. She had loved to draw when she was a child, she remembered.

There must be some bond between them to make him talk like this, to make him plead with her as though his very life depended upon it.

It was a subtle flattery she could not resist. He was bending closer and closer.

"Georgie, Georgie . . ." She felt his breath on her cheek. It was as if she were drugged with some sweet, powerful incense.

She tried to shake off that influence, she rose to her feet. Instantly he ceased speaking, and his whole attitude had changed. The spell was broken. He was watching her like a cat.

He didn't look as if he loved her now. He looked more as if he hated her, was furious at her.

"I can't go away with you," she stammered. "I couldn't ever. That's all there is to it."

He stood without moving. She turned towards the hall, feeling a little miserable. Why wouldn't he speak, why wouldn't he say something now?

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

I EXPECT TO - YES - THIS MORNING - I'LL ASK HIM WHEN HE COMES OVER!
OH ARAB, MRS HETCH JUST CALLED UP. SHE HAS LOST HER AIREDALE!
SAY, I'M FED UP BEING RAZZED ABOUT THIS COAT!
John Held
12-3

"My dear, I'm all-of-a-DOOdah! I mean I'm ACtually WHIPPED down to a NUB, no less, because ever since ARab acquired this odd fur COAT of his he has been TERribly sort of TOUCHy about everything because I mean he thinks EV'ryone is trying to give him the RAZZ about this COAT, which is so PERfectly riDIC'lous, my dear. I mean I HONestly don't see HOW anybody can be so TERribly self-conscIENtious, sort of, about anything like that because I mean if I wanted to wear a coat that looked FAR worse than ARab's I would do it in a MINute and I wouldn't give a WHOOP-de-DOODle WHAT anybody SAID about it because I think it is riDIC'lous to pay the slightest aTENtion to, what people SAY, my dear—I ACtually DO! But ARab is simply TERrified, my dear, by the LEAST little reMARK that has any asPARagus sigNIFIcance even when it is something that is just said as a JOKE because I mean he is AWfully sort of SErious-minded about anything that concerns himSELF, my dear, and his PRIDE is TERribly easily HURT, like the other DAY, f'r instance, when this odd WOMan who is a friend of MOTHer's called up and told me she had last her AIREdale. When I told ARab about it, my dear, he was SIMply SEETHing with SPLEEN because he thought I was making the inCINeration that there was some conNECtion between his COAT and the mysterious disapPEARance of this AIREdale!"

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Anxious

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am almost 19 and have been in love with a young man who is four years my senior for about three years. We were vacationing at the same time, and met while attending a picnic. I went out a few days later with him and his boy friend and my girl friend. In a few days I was to return home and he to school. He promised to write me. About a month later I received a card upon which he had put his address, so I answered. I never received an answer. When I first met him I was not in love with him, but showed a friendly interest in him. Some time later I happened to be talking to a young woman, who chanced to know him and also knew that I was acquainted with him. She told me he was a very fine boy and came of a good family. She told me he did not bother with the girls and hardly ever went out with one. I was aware of this fact, because I had discovered it in the little time I had known him. It was after this that I really became in love with him even though I had not seen him since that summer. I asked everyone I knew that knew him and they all told me the same thing—a nice boy but he does not bother with the girls. I wanted so badly to become acquainted with him again, but I did not know how to do it. I know a young man who attends the same college as he did, so this summer when they were home from school he fixed a date for me. The other fellow went along with us with my girl friend. This boy did not know it was I he was to go with, it was to be a blind date. We were introduced again and I acted as if I had never seen him. About 10 minutes after we left he asked me if he had not met me before. He said he did not remember my face, but he remembered my name. Later on in the evening I showed signs that I had met him before. He was a perfect gentleman and treated me wonderfully and did not seem a bit snobbish like some people had told me he was. We attended the theater and then went home and talked for awhile. When he left he did not say anything about wanting to see me again or calling me some time, although I did not urge him or give my number to him without his asking. He could see me easy enough now, because he is staying at home and going to school here. While he was on his vacation I heard he had gone with other girls several times. Do you think he cares for me? Would it be all right if I would send him a Christmas card? What shall I do to get better acquainted with him? I am waiting patiently for your good advice and will follow it.

ANXIOUS.

My dear, you have already done all you can to further this acquaintance. Wait until he seeks you out. It would be all right to send him a Christmas card.

Dutch

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am deeply in love with two young men. The one, whom I shall call A, is going with a wealthy girl, but, Miss Gale, I know that he loves me. I met him at a party and ever since then we have gone together until he met this third woman. What should I do? I am past 17 and am permitted to have beaux, should I? The other fellow, whom I shall call C, went with me for quite a while and confessed that he loved me, but now he goes with another girl. He quit me because I would not go for a ride with him and two pals. Did he do right? I have been told that I have personality. How can I cultivate it? I do not believe that the three much-discussed vices hurt anyone. I partake of all three.

DUTCH.

You aren't in love with either, my dear, or you wouldn't be so attracted to both. Try to forget them, since they are both interested now in other girls.

Worried

DEAR MISS GALE:

Dear Miss Gale—I am a girl of 21, and am considered a good looker by my friends. I am in training to be a nurse in one of our hospitals. My problem is this: I have been out with a fellow a year my senior, on several occasions, and I love him very dearly. He claims he loves me also, which I think he does. But the fault I have with him is always in some sort of fight. When I ask him why he does those things, he says, "Oh, I am just a happy-go-lucky." I tried to persuade him to keep away from his companions as they are considered as the worst on this side of the river, but to no avail. Lately he was engaged in a fight with a number of Mexicans where it took 44 stitches to close his wounds. In the hospital he told me not to worry, as they were only a few scratches. Would you please advise me in what way I could cure him of his habits and companions as they are the cause of his "downfall."

WORRIED.

Aren't you somewhat afraid to consider marrying a man of such a tempestuous disposition? It doesn't seem to me as if he would make a very reliable, companionable husband. However, why not ask him to control his temper for your sake, telling him how much this all humiliates you? If he really loves you, he will stop.

Gloria

DEAR MISS GALE:

I've never written to you before, but I had to ask for some of your wonderful advice, so please help me. Here's the problem. It's about two sisters, one 17 years old, the other 19 years old. They are very pretty blondes. Now the younger one was married about a year ago and the older one can marry too if she wants to. She is a good girl with high ideals. She never went out with a boy. She doesn't seem to be crazy about men like most girls are. She could have a string of boy friends if she wanted to, everybody says she is the best girl in town. Isn't that the kind of a girl a man wants for his own? Now, Miss Gale, some one told her she ought to be ashamed that her sister married before she did so please print this letter with your wonderful advice. She reads your column and I want her to know what you say about this. I suppose you know how she must feel about it.

GLORIA.

The older girl is much more sensible not to marry so young. Her sister may be sorry, some day, that she didn't wait until her tastes were formed and she knew just what kind of man to marry.

Boob

DEAR MISS GALE:

I read your column for the lovelorn every evening and think it quite interesting. I am a young girl 18 years old and a senior in high school. I am neither good-looking or ugly, but plenty of room for improvement. Miss Gale, I would like to say a few words concerning the three most widely discussed questions, drinking, smoking and petting. I think drinking for a girl or fellow is the lowest thing they can do. Smoking for a girl is nearly as bad unless its done in the privacy of her own room. Petting is done a great deal among the younger generation. I do not like to spend a whole evening in just petting, but I see no harm in an occasional kiss, if the fellow is sincere. Miss Gale, I am very fond of a fellow about eight years older than myself. Do you think he is too old for me? He lives in the same town as I do and I see him quite often. He seems to care a little bit for me as he always treats me so nicely. Do you think he likes me? I liked a "Decent Fellows" letter and wish he would write.

BOOB.

Do you think any fellow is particularly sincere who "give an occasional kiss," my dear? This man probably likes you but no more, or you would see him more frequently.

Out for a Good Time

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a steady reader of your column, and wrote to you for advice several times last year and each time I received excellent advice for which I wish to thank you. You said it was the girl's privilege to invite the boy to call, and I tried that out, and found that it worked very well. Just at present I am not "in love" as I have just stopped going "steady" with a fellow. Now I am going with all the fellows, and smoke a little, neck a little and have a real good time. I do not drink. What do you think of me, Miss Gale? Thanking you in advance, I am

OUT FOR A GOOD TIME.

I am glad you found my advice good, my dear. Now take it again and refuse to "drink a little and neck a little."

Sweet Sixteen

DEAR MISS GALE:

First, I want to compliment you on your wonderful advice. There is not a day passes that I do not read your column. Now I will tell you my trouble. I am a girl of 16. Of course when you read this you will say that I am too young to think of love, but, nevertheless, I am a human being and all of us have hearts. I recently met a boy a little older than myself and have grown very fond of him. He has taken me to parties and dances, and has treated me very fine. I see him every day in school, but not long enough to speak with him. I would like to know why he doesn't ask me for a date any more. It is true that I was the center of much envy when he took me to the school dance, for there are loads of girls who think a lot of him. Perhaps I am a little hasty, but I think an awful lot of him. I am said to be very good looking and have always been complimented in my dancing; also I am popular at school. Now, please, don't think I am a bragger, for that is the last thing I wish to be. Will you please tell me what I can do to gain this boy's favor? I want to say that I am also against petting, smoking and especially drinking on a girl's part. How a girl with any sense can take to drink is beyond me. I certainly think something should be done about it.

SWEET SIXTEEN.

My dear, there is no accounting for the way fancy changes, so I am afraid you must just accept this boy's not seeing you any more. There is no way to compel his interest if it has wandered. Be as pleasant and friendly as ever and don't show him that you are hurt.

LOVE'S EMBERS by Adele Garrison

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Will Mary Harrison Become a Star, After All?

THE dismayed negation in Lillian's eyes transmuted itself into words as I looked at her incredulously.

"Not this year, Madge," she said decidedly. "Oh, of course for a few days, yes, when I first come out to the country. Marion would be most unhappy if she could not have a little time at the farm. But I am planning next year to buy a little place of my own somewhere within a hundred miles from New York, either in the mountains or by the sea, nothing pretentious, but an old house that Marion and I can do over ourselves. This summer I'm going to get a little car, and go scouting around with Marion looking for the right sort of place which will suit both of us."

"Then," I said authoritatively, "that is all the more reason why you should make the farm your home this summer. You can go and come from there as easily as you can from any other place, can't you?"

"Far more easily," Lillian agreed. "But let's see—how many people have you there this summer? Dicky—"

"Dicky's not there except for week-ends," I returned, flushing as I thought how few were my husband's visits to his home—yet no more frequent than any real desire of mine to have him there. This I had to acknowledge, shamefacedly, even as I listened to Lillian's reply.

"Unless he takes a sudden notion to camp down there for a month or so, as he is extremely likely to do. You see I know the Dicky-bird. And then you have your mother-in-law and Katherine Bickett and Junior and Mary Harrison."

Suddenly I realized the reason for her refusal to come to the farmhouse for the summer. It had betrayed itself in the intonation with which she sounded the name of Dicky's lovely niece. I was sure that no one less familiar with her voice than I would have noted it. But I know her every inflection, and I knew that she did not wish to throw her own young daughter into close association with Mary during the long idle summer months.

Curiously enough, despite my long close friendship with Lillian, and my really deep love for her daughter, I felt a sudden fierce partisan resentment of her attitude. Dicky's young niece had given me much trouble and anxiety, but Lillian's words and the deduction I instantly drew from them, told me that Mary had found a place for herself in my heart, which made me her champion.

"I have all of those," I said, looking steadily at Lillian. "Yet there is still plenty of room in that big old farmhouse for you and Marion and you know it. Frankly, I can see no possible reason for your not coming to us, unless you've suddenly decided you'll be making a social error by including us in your visiting list."

I laughed lightly as I finished, but I knew by a sudden glint in Lillian's eyes and the deeper etching of the little lines at the corner of her mouth that she caught my meaning and realized that I understood her reason for refusing my invitation.

Mr. Veritzen, who, of course, understood nothing of the little byplay, saved her from answering me by inquiring interestedly:

"Did you say Mary Harrison is with you? I was under the impression that she had gone to Detroit upon her recovery."

"The physicians counseled sea air and the simple farm life for her," I returned.

"Ah, yes, an eastern Long Island farm would be an ideal place for her complete recuperation," he said. "And I can imagine a no more delightful cicerone than she has. How about it, Lillian? If I suffer a nervous breakdown, do you think Mrs. Graham might be persuaded to permit me to come to the farm also?"

He was sounding the personal note again, but I was too much absorbed in something else to notice it. His mention of Mary Harrison had brought vividly before me the disturbing fact that when he knew of the girl's escapade as the masked dancer—something which she had determined to tell him herself—he, in all probability, would withdraw the offer which had given her the rare chance of becoming a "Veritzen star."

Gratitude .:. By LUCY LOWELL

"DON'T overload gratitude," wrote the wise Benjamin Franklin. He added, "If you do, she'll kick."

It strikes me that here is a bit of advice to think about. There is, perhaps, no experience in the world so completely banal to one who has done a favor, great or small, as that in which the recipient of the favor undertakes to express his thanks in the overwhelming manner which some seem to consider necessary for such action.

However, there is no real emphasis in repetition, hyperbole, bizarre methods and manners of speech. Those instead carry an inference of a lack of conviction which must be made up for by exaggeration.

They are resorted to by some because of self-consciousness. Others suffering, perhaps, from a slight inferiority complex, unconsciously use such as a means of balancing up their shortcomings. And still others are handicapped by a true conception of the value of giving.

In any case the effect upon the giver—the one who conferred the favor—is to make him think. "What have I done to deserve all this?"

As a matter of fact the one who benefits most from a kindly deed is the perpetrator of it. A favor is a sort of benevolent boomerang which gathers blessings as it flies back to the one who sent it out.

And while this does not relieve the recipient of the necessity for being grateful, it does take from him any reason for abject gratitude.

"Thank you," sincerely spoken is the most acceptible expression of gratitude.

Problems Dance Hall Presents

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ABOUT once in so often the dance hall problem comes bobbing up through letters written to this column.

Without doubt some "nice" girls do go to public dance halls unescorted, as well as to showy cabarets, and dance with unknown men. But a girl whose enthusiasm for a good time leads her to such places alone usually assumes either an apologetic or defiant manner in admitting she does so. And she is always careful to state that she pays for her own "refreshments" and goes home alone.

Peggy and Bobby bring up the old discussion in the following letter, taking opposite views of the question:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"A friend and I have argued very often on a certain subject and now we leave it for you to decide for us.

"Is it proper for a girl 16 years old to attend public dances unescorted? Peggy says it is, because she meets many young men she knows at these dances. I say it isn't, because she doesn't know what kind of a crowd she gets into, and when she is once there she will naturally dance with anyone who asks her. Will you please decide this question for us?

"PEGGY AND BOBBY."

Dear Peggy and Bobbie, that's just the one thing I'm not willing to do—settle the question for you. In the long run you will have to settle this and all the other questions that come along according to your own conscience and convictions.

But I will gladly tell you what I think about girls going to public dance halls. And if my line of reasoning happens to clarify the question for you I shall be very glad.

A nice girl—like Peggy, for instance—may go to public dance halls and escape from harm. She may be clever enough to be able to distinguish between decent young men who attend and those who are cads.

But she faces distinct dangers in going to such a place. A girl who deliberately rushes up to dangers will most likely have to face the consequences sooner or later. And she is not apt to receive much sympathy when she does.

Custom and convention alike declare that "nice" girls shall not go unescorted to cabarets and dance halls. As a result when a nice girl does go some if not all the men she meets there are likely to take her for a girl who is not nice, not particular, and treat her and talk about her accordingly. Why should a self-respecting girl care to run such a chance?

I know a woman who is thoroughly good, although uneducated. She permitted her three daughters to go to public dance halls, declaring that because they behaved themselves properly they were quite safe anywhere. Only a few days after she had given me her opinion of the dance halls as safe, this good woman received a shock which sent her to her bed. Two of her daughters suddenly disappeared. For weeks the girls were listed by the Bureau of Missing Persons.

Finally they returned home. One had eloped without marriage and was in dreadful trouble. The other had married a member of another race. They had met these men at dance halls.

Even though a girl may escape actual harm in attending cheap dances and cabarets, yet she lowers her standard of values by doing so. And just to that extent she loses her respect for herself and cheapens herself in the eyes of others.

Isn't it better, under all the circumstances, girls, to choose some other form of good time, even though it may lack the thrill that comes from skirting the brink of danger?

I can't decide the question for you. Nor would I care to. Your own cleverness and sense of values will decide for you.

I agree with the policy of a well-known American, who said to his 19-year-old daughter: "I do not forbid you to go to public dance halls. But I would rather not have you go, because public dance halls are no place for a young girl."

His darghter went once or twice, then came to her father, saying:

"You're right, dad; they are no place to go."

A wise philosopher has said, in substance, there are two things each of us can do: choose the best for ourselves and help others to choose the best.

Here's hoping, dear girls, you will one and all choose the best company, the best standards, the best kind of good times, and eventually the best man in the world for a husband.

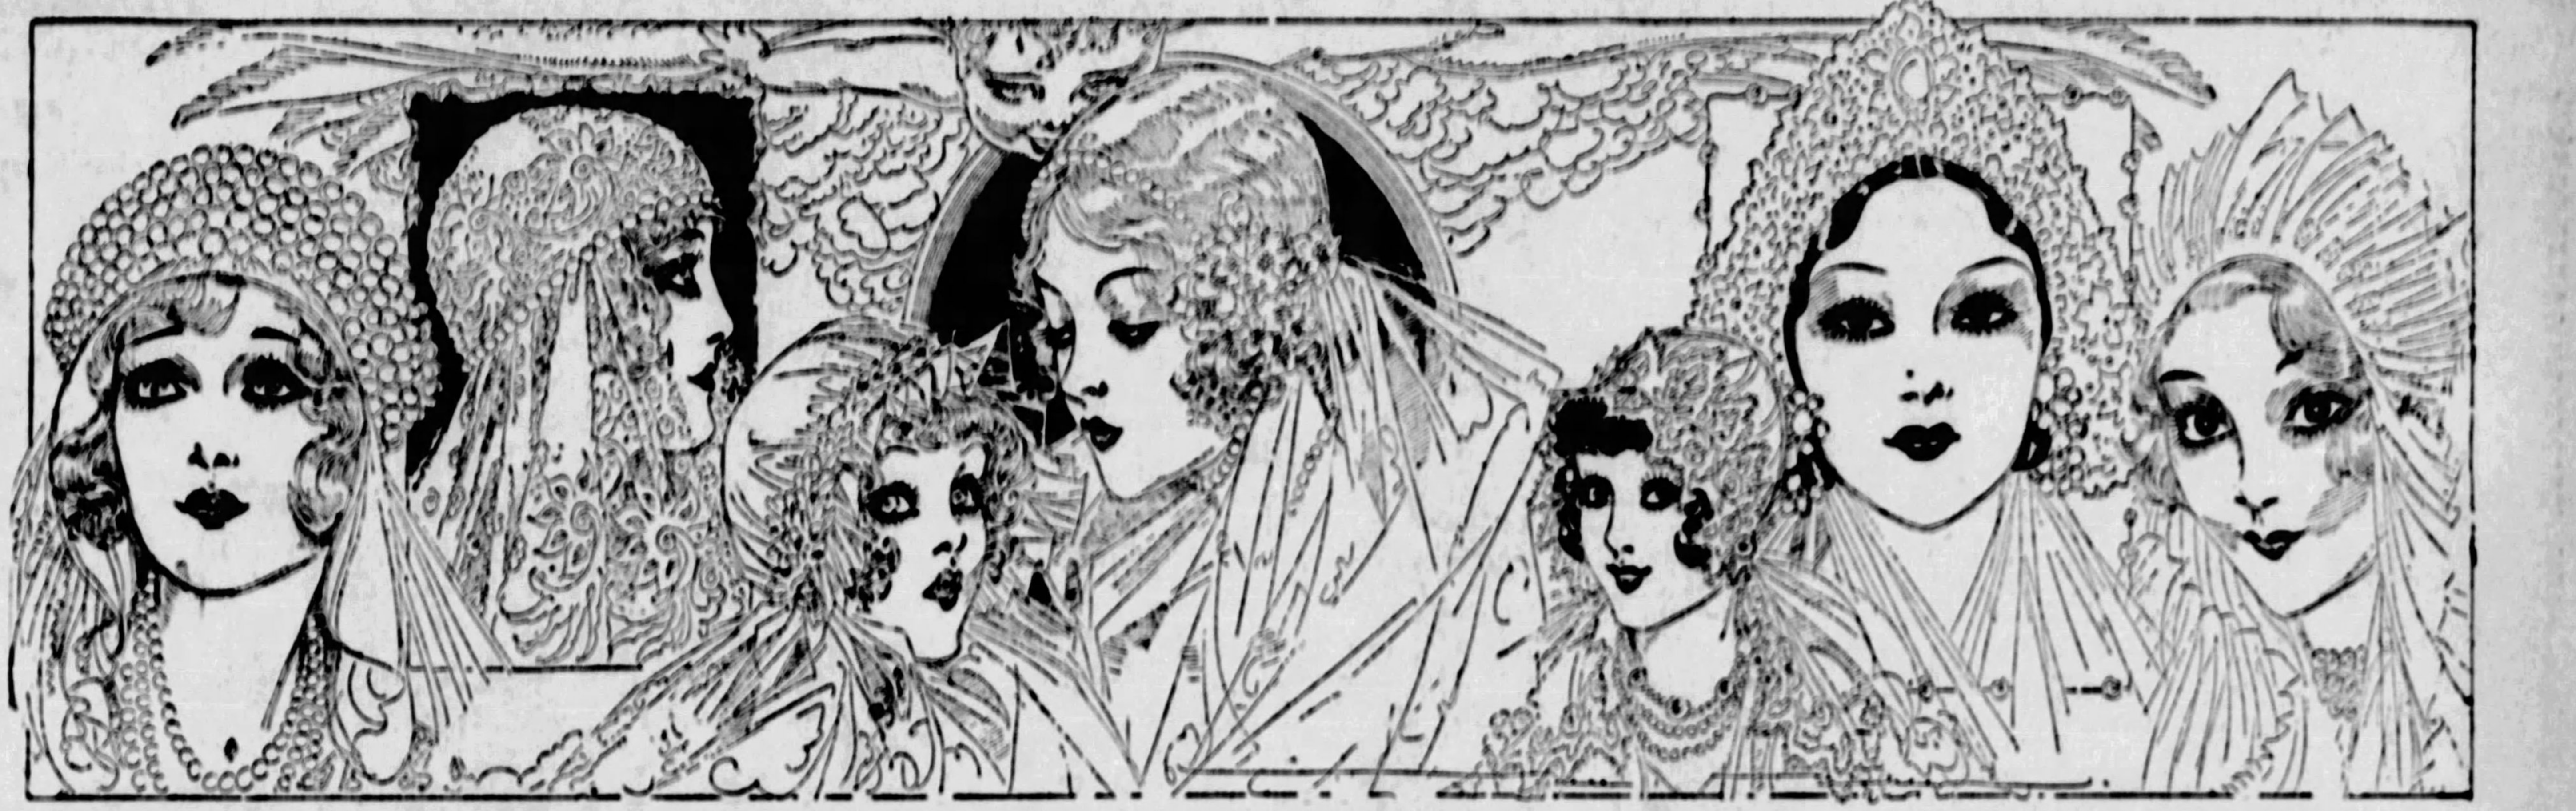
Vanilla Souffle

One cup milk, 5 tablespoons flour, 1-3 cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 egg yolks, 3 egg whites, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Make a sauce by beating the butter, add the flour slowly, stirring constantly, and then add the salt and milk, stirring while adding. Cook until smooth and thickened. Cool this sauce, add the sugar, vanilla and egg yolks, which have been beaten to a yellow cream, then carefully fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour this mixture into a well-greased baking dish, uncovered, in a pan which contains about one inch of hot water. Bake for one hour in an oven of 325 degrees F.

SOME BRIDES' VEILS. "BY REQUEST"

Drawn By
Nell Brinkley



THE refrain of six letters that are spread like a fan before me is the same for each one: "Would you please make a picture of some ways to wear a bridal veil? I am going to be married quite soon!" A Pink letter and a Blue one. The pink one has a tissue lining with rosebuds on it, that grapples with the letter when you try to get it free. The blue one has a curly monogram upon it that keeps the secret of the writer's initials completely until you find her little name. One Grey one—very prim and proper. Two White ones who say: the one, "I cost as much as an envelope ever does"; the other, humbly, "I am quite poor but very honest, and you would like the little fist that penned me, if ever the Fate that keeps folks strangers would make you and her known to each other!" And one Orchid one. So, by the time the last one, all perfumed and fluttering, came posting along, I decided that a lady would be a deviless to ignore the prayer of so nice a thing as a bride-to-be. And so simple a prayer!

I have no letters from grooms-to-be. Their hair, the ring and the choice between two suits to wear is all they have to trouble them. Do you suppose—can it be—I wonder—do they write to Beau Nash—or not at all?

So here are some tips—a "lady-artist's" notions.

If you are a golden-haired symphony in wistful blue and cream and roses, an appealing-eyed Princess type—then you can wear the Princess type head-dress—the affair of pearls like a crown with the veil spraying from under it.

If you have a perfect profile, no matter which sort it is, you can wear the severe cap type, a veil of solid lace held tight down over your head and outlining the shape of your skull—with a circlet of anything you choose, tiny flowers, pearls, or a silver band.

If you have a baby-face, then a baby-bonnet effect was made for you; a flaring, stiff frill making a misty frame for curls and shining eyes. This veil would be all of tulle, to keep the airy, faery look. And held with a wreath of orange blossoms.

If you are ethereal, demure, old-fashioned, then uncovered hair, waved and shining, with the veil held behind your head and over your ears with gardenias, with perhaps the pearls over the top and under your chin to make demureness more demure, would be the thing for you, Mademoiselle.

If you are cute, then lace and tulle, shaped into the very twin of the little felt hat you wear every day, would be very smart, very fetching, and very new.

If you are dark, high-cheek-boned, serious—if you look anything like the girl next to the last one—then the Russian-shaped coif, that fits close around glossy black hair and naked forehead, made of beautiful, rather heavy lace! The chubby, cheerful face doesn't look the most fascinating in the world in this.

The last is one that anyone may try. Fluted frills flaring back from the face and arranged to frame it—even under the chin, almost.

Try any of them with an old piece of veiling—little Miss who is soon to be a Missus. I may be mistaken about them all. Miss Demure may be marvelous in the Russian coif. And Miss Russian adorable in the baby-frill!

Outdoors Best for Health of the Baby

WHAT do you do with your baby on a rainy day? Suppose there is a week of rain, what do you do?

DR COPELAND

I assume that you take the little chap into the open air every morning and every afternoon. The reason I assume this is because it is the thing you should do and of course you are only too glad to do the necessary things.

The baby canont thrive without fresh air and out-of-door air. You don't want to bring up your precious child under the conditions which surround a hot house plant.

You will recall the flower or a plant of this sort is very attractive while it is in the hot house. But if that plant is removed to a place in the open air or in a house where the temperature is not uniform, immediately the plant droops and dies.

It is just as bad for a baby to be brought up in a hot home. Kept indoors all the time, the child will not develop strength and vigor. There will be no powers of resistance such as the normal child possesses.

The result of such faulty upbringing is that the infant is weak, thin blooded, poorly nourished and unready for the contacts and experiences which must come in the course of time. Almost as sure as fate acute disease will attack that little one, and, in all probability, take its life.

It is a real chore to have to dress the baby for the out-of-doors excursion. Add to this the trouble the mother must take to guard her own body against the cold and bad weather. To go through this twice a day is a real burden.

But it must be done. The red cheeks, ravenous appetite and clear eyes of the baby are sufficient reward.

We will agree then that the child gets the benefit of all the good weather. What happens on rainy days, especially during a long rainy spell?

If it is too wet to go out, there must be some substitute for these daily excursions. The best one is by the use of the open window.

The baby may be dressed and prepared for his fresh air just as if he were going into the park. Put in his cab, he is wheeled into the room with wide open windows and left here the same length of time he is out on fine days.

While we are discussing the airings of the baby, will be a good time to repeat some advice I frequently give. This relates to the matter of getting ready for the outing.

Do not bundle the baby by wrapping it in coat, mufflers and carriage robe until you are ready to go out. If you do, the child will perspire and the intimate garments will become moist from the perspiration. Then when the infant gets into the cold, there is a chilling of the surfaces of the body and bad consequences.

It is better for the mother to get herself ready first. Then she can apply the heavy garments and get the baby into the air within a few moments.

These outings for the baby must be regular as the calendar. Every day in the year, summer and winter, unless the baby is actually sick, should be the rule in every household. There must be no departure from the rule if the baby is to thrive.

Answers to Health Queries

M. M.—Q. Would it be best to shave my little boy's head, as he is recovering from scarlet fever and his hair fell out so badly I have had it clipped? Would clipping it again be sufficient?

A. Clipping it again and using a good hair tonic should be helpful. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Horoscopes

Sunday, December 4.

High office among men, when legitimately attained, deserves reverence.—LIDDON.

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows auspicious circumstances for religious, benevolent, social and educational pursuits, with a stabilizing and exciting position for those in places of power, but caution against duplicity, treachery and ill-temper is advised.

Those whose birthday it is should rise to prominent and stable position through their own efforts, during the year, but they should be on guard against treachery and fraud, mainly through writings or contracts. Shun strife and litigation.

A child born on this day may have many splendid talents and should attain good position through its industry and perseverance.

Notable Nativity: Thomas Carlyle, author and essayist.

Monday, December 5.

Monday's sidereal operations are generally classed as negative and conflicting. There may be change, and it may be well to seek connection with corporations, secret orders or where diplomacy and tact are required. Speculation may succeed. Perplexing personal matters are indicated.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting and perplexing problems, business and personal. Gain by speculation is possible. Change is probable and connection with new projects.

A child born on this day may be changeable and restless, but talented.

Notable Nativity: Gen Custer, Indian fighter.

Wall Street Goes Merrily On; Watch Southern Men Rise

By B. C. FORBES

SPECULATION in Wall street goes merrily on. Most of the aggressive bulls don't want to talk about industrial conditions, business conditions, employment conditions, monetary conditions or anything except stock quotations.

"Look at the advances scored by —," they tell you, rattling off half a dozen stocks which happen to have been the star performers that day or in the previous few days. All that matters, they let you know, is that the quotations for various speculative issues are still shooting upwards.

One other thing they mention. That is the dazzling rise in the price of New York Stock Exchange seats. "You'll soon see seats selling at half a million, instead of a third of a million," they assure you.

The writer has been an observer of Wall street's activities for nearly a quarter of a century and has seen similar situations before now. He is reminded of the old farmer who refused to become panicky over a very long rain and who did not join a gathering to offer prayer that the downpour stop. When quarreled with, he replied that only once in his long life had he known any rain that didn't stop. When they asked "When was that?" he calmly replied, "This rain—and I am sure it will stop, too."

No rain lasts forever any more than any tree ever quite reaches heaven. Some day the three-ring circus in Wall street will change the nature of its performance.

TWO ex-clerks, both born in the South, have just been made head of that important southern railway, the Seaboard Air Line, succeeding the lamented S. Davies Warfield.

Robert L. Nutt, the new chairman, was born in North Carolina, became a clerk with the Seaboard when 19 and has steadily climbed since. He is now 54.

L. R. Powell, Jr., a native of Virginia, joined the Seaboard as a clerk in 1902, when he was 18. Now he becomes president. Not long since another Southerner, Whiteford R. Cole, was made president of an important southern line, the Louisville and Nashville.

During the next decade you will probably see an increasing number of southerners attain positions of great eminence in industry and business. Conditions immediately following the Civil War were not propitious for raising educated families. But things had improved enough in 25 years to give southern boys a better chance. Not only so, but the South ras become a much greater factor industrially during the last dozen years, so that capable fellows have had wider opportunities to qualify for bigger responsibilities. Such men will be coming to the fore more frequently during the coming years.

MORE big banks. New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit—in short, almost every city is doing it. The latest announcement comes from Los Angeles. J. Dabney Day tells me that the Citizens National Bank of Los Angeles and the Citizens Trust and Savings Bank will be consolidated, giving total resources of $117,000,000, or more than any other bank in Los Angeles not operating branches outside of the city.

As industrial organizations become larger it is necessary for banking institutions to keep pace in order to be able to offer adequate banking and financing facilities.

SPECULATION in mining shares in Canada is more animated than anything witnessed in Wall street. Canada at present is enjoying a more pronounced measure of prosperity than the United States. Lots of Canadians apparently have money to play with. The most important mining area now attracting attention is in Northern Manitoba, known as the Flin Flon district—often dubbed "Flim-Flam," but apparently without adequate foundation. The most responsible authorities in Canada declare emphatically that this is a long belt of extraordinary mineral wealth—copper, zinc, gold, silver.

In the United States digging for oil is more in vogue at the moment than digging for new mines.

SOMETHING new in finance: Individuals of great wealth are beginning to turn themselves into corporations. A very prominent New York real estate operator did this a few weeks ago. And now Eric P. Swenson, who has vast interests in Texas and elsewhere and who is also chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, has formed the Swenson Texas Company, a holding company for his enormous wealth.

The day is coming when you will be able to buy shares in individuals, so to speak. This is a great nation!

Share Prices Steady In Local Market

Prices were steady to firm in the short session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, Lone Star Gas failed to develop a definite trend and held close to the levels prevailing on the close Friday, Following announcement of the proposed capital change about 5,000 shares of the stock were sold Friday on a downturn of about three points,

Most of the Lone Star handled today was from a fraction to a point above the low mark of yesterday's reaction with demand and supply apparently pretty evenly balanced but with a slight advantage on the up side. Trading volume Lone Star showed a decrease from the Friday turnover while other fuels continued to lag also. An upturn in the Wyoming oil stocks on the New York Curb Friday stimulated a little demand for Salt Creek Consolidated but there seemed to be plenty of stock available.

CONVICT ESCAPES FROM ROCKVIEW IN SNOWSTORM

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Dec. 2—James Jeffries, Erie county larceny convict, severed relations with Rockview Penitentiary by escaping today during a snowstorm. His departure brings the week's total to two, a Negro prisoner having departed on Monday.

HEAVY DEMAND FORCES RAILS UPWARD

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Heavy buying of the rails featured the opening of today's stock market. Delaware and Hudson opened 3 points higher, and Lehigh Valley and Kansas City Southern each advanced a point or so. Southern Railway yielded about a point on realizing. Industrials were mixed, but mainly higher, with a 3-point jump in Air Reduction and a 2-point gain in Great Northern Ore certificates as the opening features.

Railroad shares continued to lead the early advance, although the industrials, particularly the chemical, metal and automotive issues, showed signs of increasing strength. Commercial Solvents quickly soared 6 points, American Agricultural Chemical preferred moved up more than 2 to a new peak at 56 and Mathieson Alkali sold at least 1½ points higher. Greene Cananea Copper continued its remarkable rise by touching a new peak at 112, or nearly four times the year's low, and Nash Motors attained a new high at 94. Lehigh Valley was heavily bought, moving up nearly 3 points in the first half hour, and Union Pacific climbed 2. Foreign exchanges opened steady, with demand sterling unchanged at $4.87 11-16.

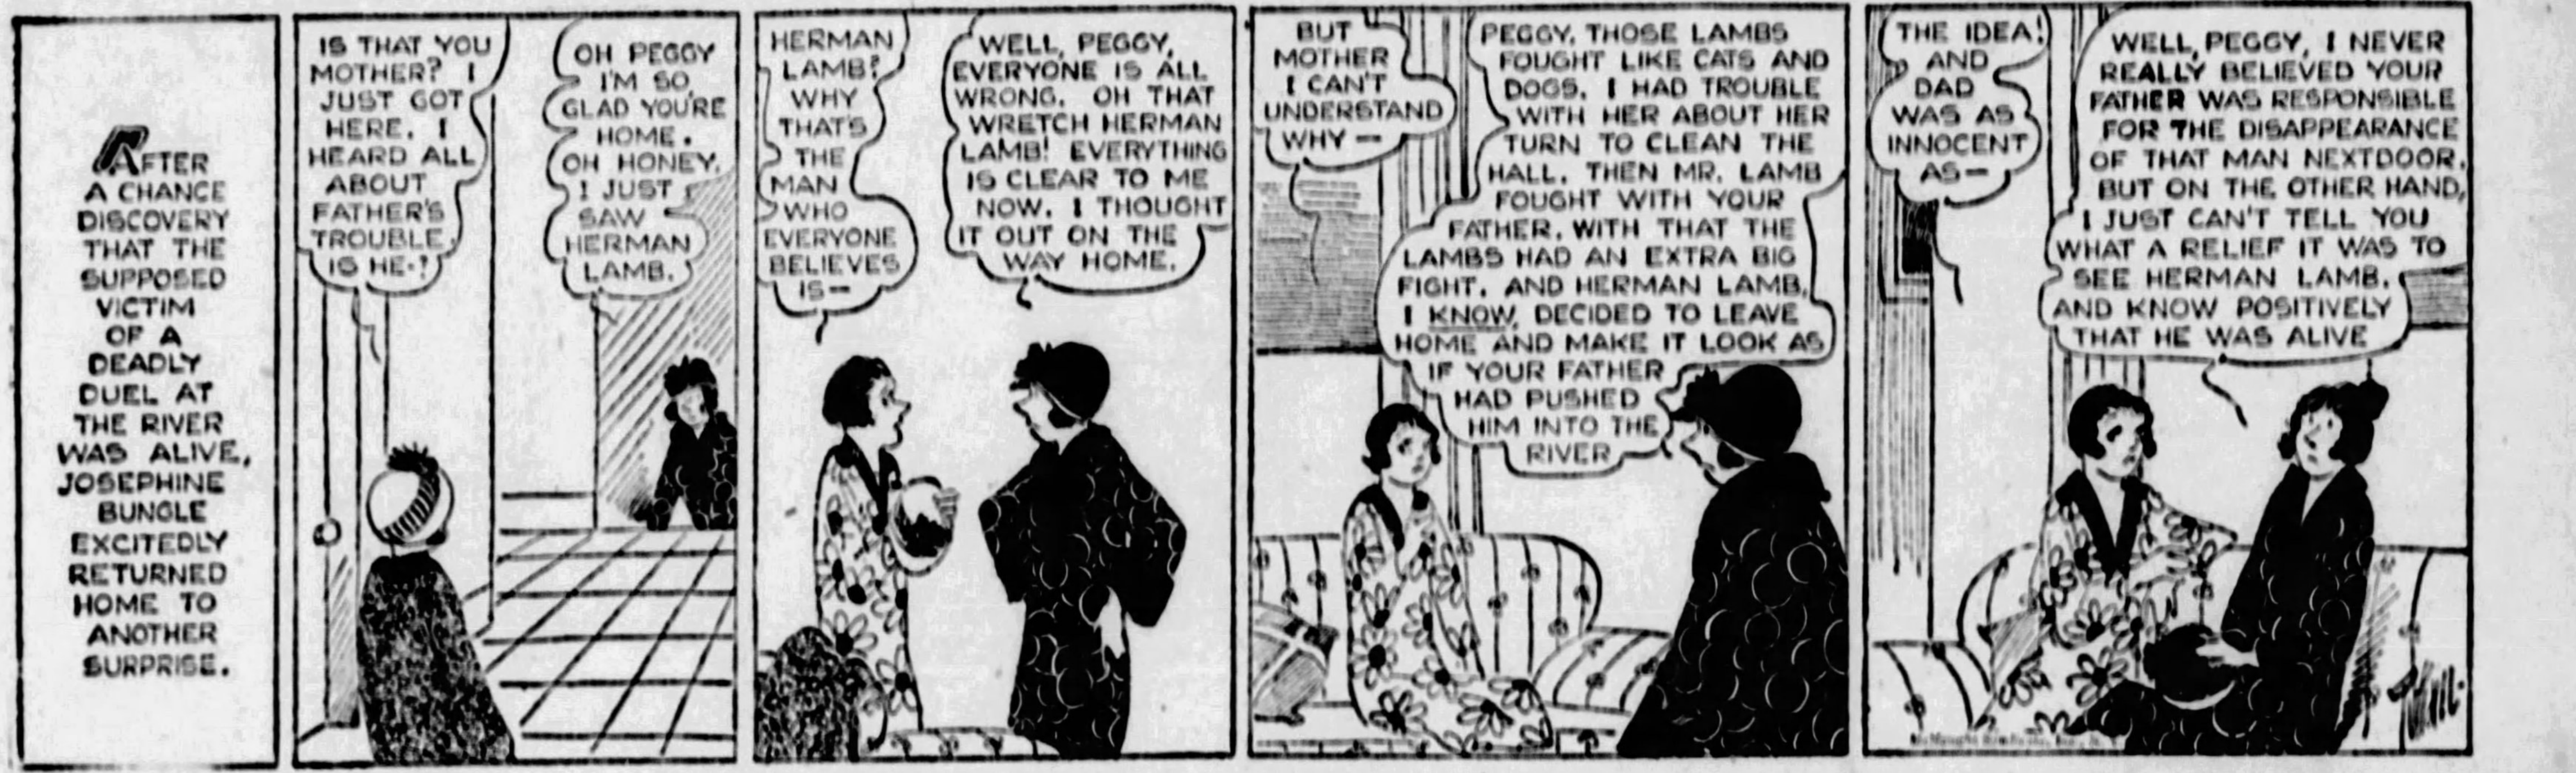
THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Mrs. Bungle Has Vision



AFTER A CHANCE DISCOVERY THAT THE SUPPOSED VICTIM OF A DEADLY DUEL AT THE RIVER WAS ALIVE, JOSEPHINE BUNGLE EXCITEDLY RETURNED HOME TO ANOTHER SURPRISE.
IS THAT YOU MOTHER? I JUST GOT HERE. I HEARD ALL ABOUT FATHER'S TROUBLE, IS HE-?
OH PEGGY I'M SO GLAD YOU'RE HOME. OH HONEY, I JUST SAW HERMAN LAMB.
HERMAN LAMB? WHY THAT'S THE MAN WHO EVERYONE BELIEVES IS—
WELL, PEGGY, EVERYONE IS ALL WRONG. OH THAT WRETCH HERMAN LAMB! EVERYTHING IS CLEAR TO ME NOW. I THOUGHT IT OUT ON THE WAY HOME.
BUT MOTHER I CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHY—
PEGGY, THOSE LAMBS FOUGHT LIKE CATS AND DOGS. I HAD TROUBLE WITH HER ABOUT HER TURN TO CLEAN THE HALL. THEN MR. LAMB FOUGHT WITH YOUR FATHER. WITH THAT THE LAMBS HAD AN EXTRA BIG FIGHT. AND HERMAN LAMB, I KNOW, DECIDED TO LEAVE HOME AND MAKE IT LOOK AS IF YOUR FATHER HAD PUSHED HIM INTO THE RIVER
THE IDEA! AND DAD WAS AS INNOCENT AS—
WELL, PEGGY, I NEVER REALLY BELIEVED YOUR FATHER WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DISAPPEARANCE OF THAT MAN NEXTDOOR, BUT ON THE OTHER HAND, I JUST CAN'T TELL YOU WHAT A RELIEF IT WAS TO SEE HERMAN LAMB, AND KNOW POSITIVELY THAT HE WAS ALIVE

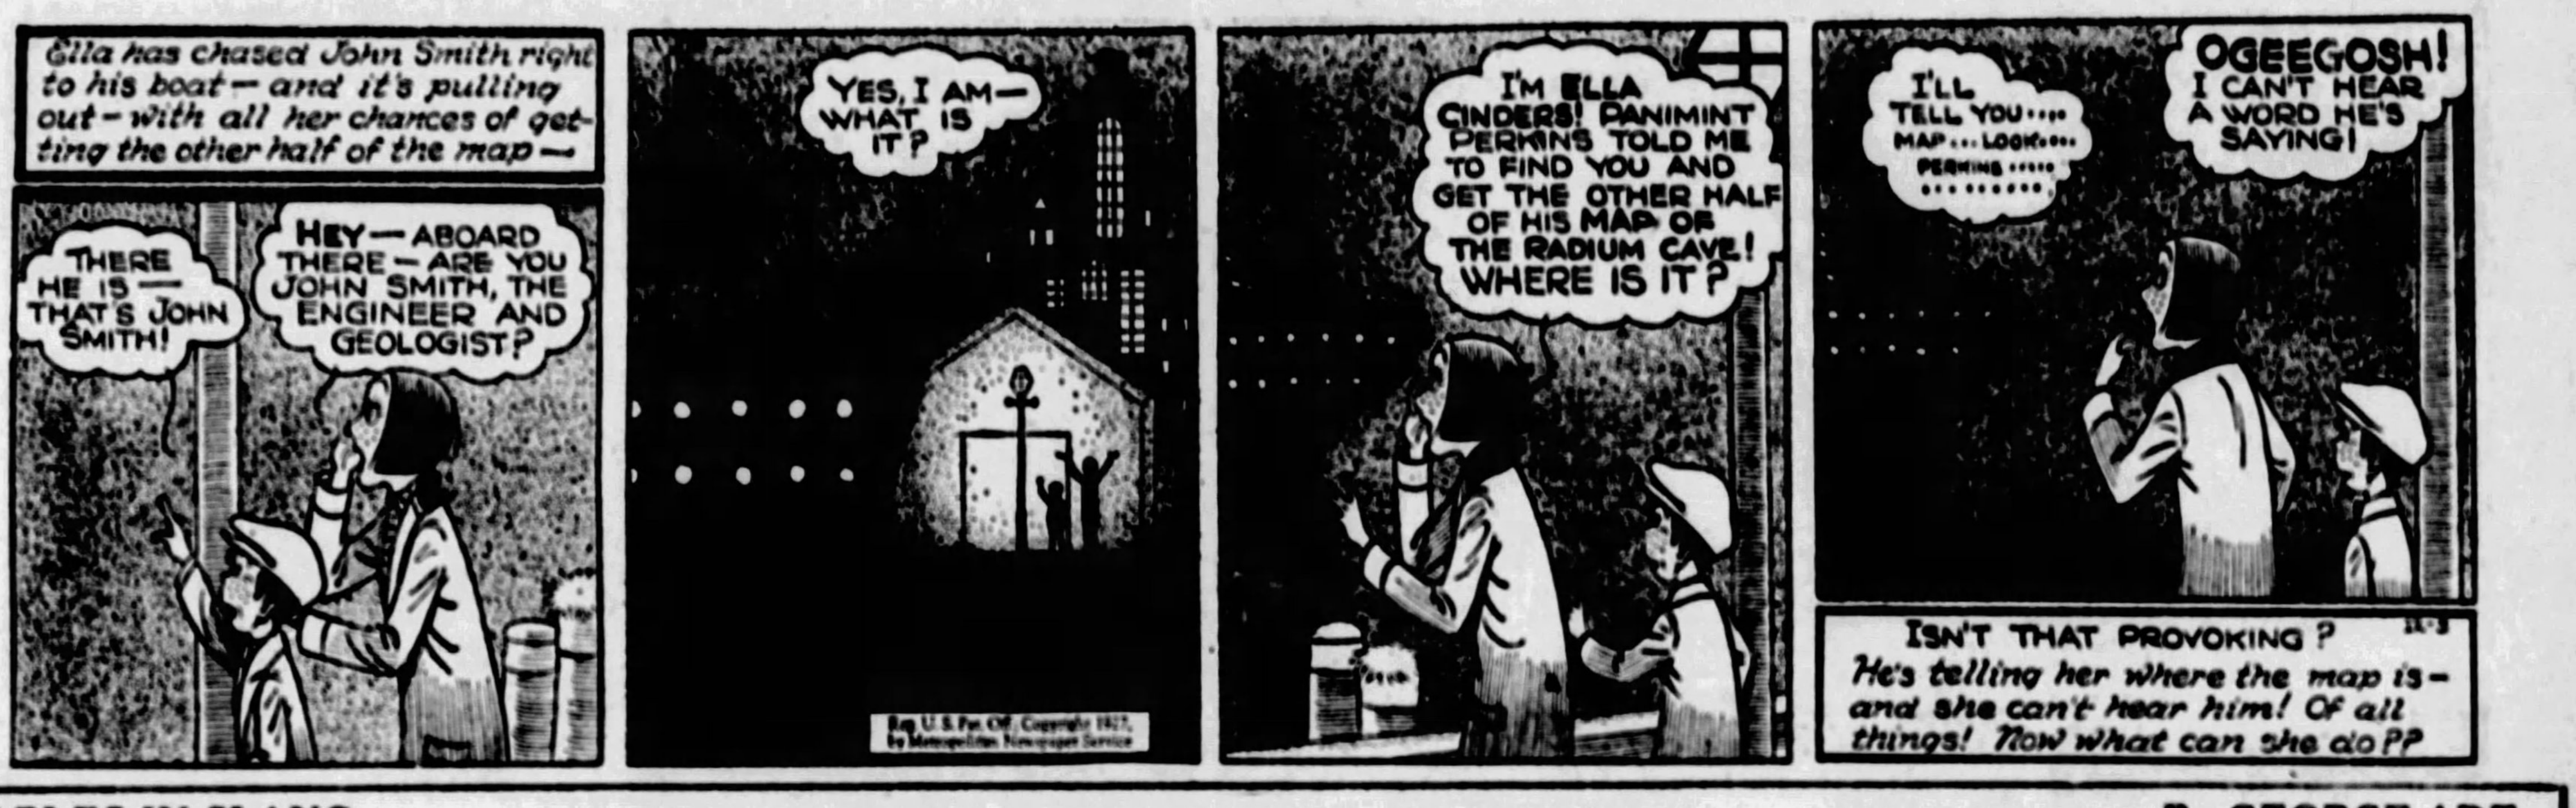
ELLA CINDERS — That's Where It Is



Ella has chased John Smith right to his boat—and it's pulling out—with all her chances of getting the other half of the map—
THERE HE IS—THAT'S JOHN SMITH!
HEY—ABOARD THERE—ARE YOU JOHN SMITH, THE ENGINEER AND GEOLOGIST?
YES, I AM—WHAT IS IT?
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Copyright 1927, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service
I'M ELLA CINDERS! PANIMINT PERKINS TOLD ME TO FIND YOU AND GET THE OTHER HALF OF HIS MAP OF THE RADIUM CAVE! WHERE IS IT?
I'LL TELL YOU... MAP... LOOK... PEEKING...
OGEEGOSH! I CAN'T HEAR A WORD HE'S SAYING!
ISN'T THAT PROVOKING? He's telling her where the map is—and she can't hear him! Of all things! Now what can she do??

BUGS BAER Says

A PRINCE OF GOOD FALLERS

THE Prince is at it again. He went for a long walk on another horse.

Ever since King Richard paged a nag on the battlefield, horses have played important roles in the lives of British kings. Richard didn't catch his horse because Old Dobbin was looking for oats and not kings.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER.

We are not rapping the Prince of Wales' knowledge of horses.

He is an authority on 'em. Also off 'em.

We can safely say without fear of corroboration that the Prince knows horses.

More than that. He knows them from the ground up. This last tumble was not due to poor equestrianism—Phil Scott, the English thumbweight had just won a fight in New York.

That's when the Prince fell off his horse.

The latest tumble took place during a fox chase. The fox escaped along with the horse. The Prince had ridden the steeplechaser for 11 miles and was then thrown six feet. Which is a very long take-off for such a short flight.

So you can blame this incident on Phil Scott. If you remember correctly the Prince has had no bumps since he rode around Long Island inspecting real estate values from a strategic position.

We couldn't understand why Eddie had failed to mark September, October and November without an anniversary tumble. The explanation was given by George Phair, who said it was due to a late fall.

The fox chase was successful. The trail led across Upside Downs, a beautiful meadows which has often entertained visiting rolaytv. When the Prince shakes the dust of a place from his feet they have got to go all over him with a whisk broom.

It's all right to criticise the Prince's riding from the sanctuary of a tossing Morris chair. As an international fact the Prince is a good horseman and it is no sinecure to jump a five-foot fence on a sober horse.

The English saddle is about the size of a postage stamp without the mucilage on the back. It's not like riding on a gentle ferry boat. We don't know one American out of a million who could stay on an English saddle long enough to walk back home with the Prince.

So we hand the Prince credit for meritorious conduct in the dismounted cavalry.

Diphtheria Prevention Is Urged; Act at Once

The Department of Public Health just now is stressing the need of treatment for the prevention of diphtheria. There has been noted an increase in the number of cases as well as in their severity. It is considered the part of wisdom to forestall the chances of a wider spread of this dangerous malady by giving children preventive attention.

Toxin-antitoxin is administered in an initial injection in the arm, followed by a weekly dose of the same remedy for three weeks. The treatment is said to be harmless to children. In order to make it available to all, free clinics have been established in room 642 City-County Building, and at 15 stations throughout the city. The hours in the City-County Building are 12 to 1 noon, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Prevention of diphtheria by the toxin-antitoxin method has been proven successful by the Department of Health, which has been employing it for five years. If parents prefer, the treatment can be given by the family physician. Whether the clinic or the home doctor is resorted to, it will be wise to give heed to the admonition of the Department of Health that there is special need for the treatment at this time.

That does not mean that merely school children should receive treatment. About 80 per cent of diphtheria cases are those of children under 10, but about 65 per cent of these little patients are of pre-school age, or under 6. Guard the health of your little ones now.

More Help Needed Now To Acquire Cook Forest

For far too long a time the project to make Cook Forest, in Northwestern Pennsylvania, an extensive natural State Park has lagged. The cost of acquiring this property is $650,000 and all that is needed is $100,000. The State some time ago agreed to pay $450,000, the remainder to be raised privately. Because the private fund lacks $100,000 of being complete the last piece of extensive virgin forest in Pennsylvania remains in danger of not coming into the hands of all the people.

This primeval beauty spot has captivated all who are familiar with it. So alluring is it that some time ago there was organized the Cook Forest Association, the purpose of which was to interest our people in the project to raise $200,000 so that it could be bought for them. The officers are busy men, but they have given much of their time and they still lack $100,000. That's a shame.

Perhaps you would be interested in knowing who some of these men are. S. Y. Ramage, an Oil City banker, is president. Taylor Allderdice, vice president, George E. Benson, treasurer, and Thomas Liggett, secretary, are Pittsburgh men. So are Directors Homer D. Williams, Henry M. Brackenridge, Howard M. McClintic, John M. Phillips and Arthur E. Braun. Judge Frank L. Harvey of Clarion is another director.

The matter of $100,000 for such a great project appears to be so simple that the necessity of making a special appeal seems absurd. Yet that is the situation and it is not to our credit. Let us find a way to help the Cook Forest Association. We need that wonderful state park.

Healthy Bodies Important As Are Trained Minds

A bit of information from the District of Columbia claims our attention, for it could quite as well have developed in any American city.

The public school authorities in Washington want to make the schools effective centers for better health. One way is first to find out just what health conditions are in the schools. But, says the bulletin,

"On account of the inadequate force of medical inspectors only the younger children could be given thorough examinations."

Think of that, in the capital city of the richest nation in the world!

However, 3,761 little ones in the kindergarten or first grade were examined carefully. And here are some of the findings:

More than two-thirds had defective teeth. Nearly half had diseased tonsils. One-third had enlarged cervical glands. A fourth were suffering from poor nutrition. More than a fifth did not breathe properly because of nasal trouble. The eyes of more than an eighth were out of order. More than a tenth had faulty feet. Nearly a tenth were anaemic. Eighty-six had heart weakness.

In all 95 per cent were below par physically in some particular, and were carrying this handicap into their studies, at the cost of the taxpayers.

We had almost as depressing a result from the draft examinations in our army camps during the war, only about two grown Americans in three being revealed as physically competent.

The cost of locating and correcting these deficiencies at the threshold of our public school system would be vastly less than the cost of letting them go and grow.

Why spend millions in training the mind, only to balk at the relatively small cost of providing sound bodies?

We put these millions into our schools in the belief that an educated citizenry is of supreme importance to the state.

An educated citizenry is not more important than a healthy citizenry. It takes the two to make a virile nation.

Be Fair to Sick Veterans

The American Legion will ask Congress to require the Veterans' Bureau to supply hospital treatment to all veterans who need it, regardless of the origin of their diseases and disabilities.

That would stop much unfair discrimination. It would also be just, for any life that was good enough to be used in the national defense is good enough for the nation to try to save.

Sun-Balls

AMONG the most remarkable of celestial objects are the globular star-clusters. They are spherical assemblages of stars, more condensed near the center of the cluster and thinning out toward the circumference, but all so distant that very powerful telescopes are required to reveal the existence of their individual stars, whose light is integrated, or massed, in what appear as single glowing specks. About 95 of these objects have been recognized in the heavens, and their distribution on opposite sides of the plane of the Milky Way, together with their motions, suggest, according to the investigations of Harlow Shapley, the director of the Harvard Observatory, that in the course of ages these condensed clusters approach and pass through the Milky Way, in which traverse they are more or less completely broken up and scattered, thus gradually adding to the richness in stars of that vast flattened or lens-shaped system which appears to be the basal plan of the stellar universe.

On the average, the globular clusters are at present enormously distant, and there is a certain degree of uniformity of size among them which comes into evidence as they are studied. Lately at the Harvard Observatory a new method has been applied in this study. It consists in the use of very small, instead of very large, telescopes. Dr. Shpley says:

"The investigations of globular clusters that I have carried out in the past years have been founded mainly on photographs with the large reflectors at Mount Wilson. Great telescopic power was necessary to separate and record adequately the exceedingly faint and concentrated individual stars. An important study of the clusters has, however, just been completed with two miniature Harvard telescopes of two inches aperture—a research that would have been quite impossible for the larger reflectors. This new work is the determination on a uniform basis of the total light of each of the globular clusters as a whole, and it forms one of the steps in determining their relative distances and their uniformity in dimensions and brightness. For this work the individual stars of a cluster are not desired, as the integrated photographic effect can be most satisfactorily measured on plates made with such small telescopes that the images of the clusters are themselves starlike."

One of Harvard's women astronomers, Miss Sawyer, has studied hundreds of these new photographs, and the result is to show that, while there is some variety among the globular clusters, yet most of the typical systems are much alike in absolute or intrinsic luminosity. They average 12.4 magnitudes brighter than our sun; i. e., if the sun and one of these clusters were placed at the same distance from us, the cluster would appear 12.4 magnitudes more luminous than the sun. This means about 220,000 times. But this immense amount of light would be shared among a great number of stars, for there are many thousands included in each cluster.

Are You Wasting Time?

YOU wonder why a certain friend has refused to do you a favor.

You have only kindly feelings for that friend and it galls you to think that your request was refused.

You moralize on the decadence of friendship.

You think you would not go back on a friend in an emergency.

You might be surprised to know that your friend thinks that it was a nice little way of teaching you a lesson.

Think it over and see if you can't remember a time when you might have done a kind thing for that friend but ignored your opportunity.

You did not think of it, you say.

Do you ever think of anything that might disturb your recreational periods?

If you can look back and can see that you have neither learned new and valuable facts nor saved money, you are indeed a big loser.

Isn't it surprising that you can go on month after month without gaining knowledge that is worth while?

But if you cannot bring it to memory it is just as bad as if you had never heard valuable knowledge.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: Suds Leading Upward

HERE'S American history in the making.

Frieda and Emil are doing it. They are two young people of Norwegian extraction, newly married, settled in a small, growing community. Emil works in a service station. Frieda keeps house. Perhaps if they still lived in the old country they would be working in a service station and keeping house to the end of their days. But there's something about America—a sort of spiritual yeast—that won't let healthy young people stay put.

Emil is excited about airplanes.

When you speak of flying to Emil a blue fire lights in his eyes—the same fire which must have glowed in his Viking father's eyes long ago. Some day he hopes to fly. He works in shifts at the service station. During his hours off, he attends an aviation school in a big field nearby.

It costs a good deal to go to an aviation school. Emil could not afford it on his service station salary. So Frieda washes clothes for the neighbors to pay for Emil's lessons.

Frieda is excited about flying too. As she bends her big, strong body over the tubs she talks about it to the neighbor women. Her shining arms flash through the smother of suds as thought they cut the clouds through which her mind is soaring. The airplane Emil is riding is really rising out of those white suds. And on Sunday she will rise with him.

On Sunday Frieda goes down to the aviation field. She wears her best silk dress. She and Emil walk very fast. They can hardly wait. He is telling her how much he has learned about flying in the last week. She laughs and her face glows, for she has made it possible for him to learn that. It is her flying as well as his. They climb into the plane together. There is a strange, breathless moment before they take off. Frieda waits for that moment all week. It tingles and sparkles through the tubs of subs. She can never quite believe that they will take off. But they do!

They bump and jolt down the field, in a spurt of dust. The suddenly they are above the field, rising—rising. The jolts and bumps are left behind. They are high in the air, free and alone, with faces far below—craning faces, falling away from them like scraps of paper. They are above service stations—and wash tubs—in a new world of their own—with only a great glitter and emptiness around them. Frieda laughs as she bends over and looks down at the little faces, falling and falling.

Wash tubs and aeroplanes—Suds and and Stars—America came that way through the dreams of humble workers toiling over tub and wheel.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Manhattan's feminine gin drinkers are not confined to pert flappers, although they seem plentiful enough. There are innumerable dipsomaniac mothers moving about night clubs in an alcoholic blur with their daughters resignedly looking on and drinking table waters.

When middle-aged women cut loose to hurdle conventions they frequently show less restraint than their youngers. And many daughters give up freedom to act as chaperones in hope of circumventing situations that will develop a tragic climax.

Divorced women often lead the alcoholic array of those who begin the day with afternoon cocktail parties. They collect the usual crowd of hangers-on always in evidence where free drinks are on tap and who seem to delight encouraging loose living.

These are women who are eventually plucked clean by the gleaners and wind up in drink and drug cures known as sanitariums. And, if the cure does not take, they usually become those mysterious patrons of family hotels who are under constant surveillance of nurses.

Youth has a resiliency. And respectability often catches them on the rebound. But middle age is not so fortunate. The "dangerous forties" is not a mere phrase. Only last evening I saw an embarrassed young girl helping her lurching, hiccoughing mother from a cafe to a taxicab.

And I have a fleeting picture of the daughter slumping into a corner of the seat to give way to hysterical sobbing. These are not carousing types of immoral women. Embittered, they indulge the single vice of heavy drinking to forget. And are unable to stop.

Dipsomania among them has grown to alarming proportions, so hospital and private sanitarium records show. Some are known to consume as much as a quart of liquor a day regularly. And that to high strung women means inevitable madness and the padded cell.

At a current drama the curtain is never lowered or lifted. The one scene is a courtroom and intermission is announced with, "Court is adjourned." The audience arrives to find people slowly gathering in the courtroom.

A harrassed Broadway rounder was asked why he didn't get more sleep. "Oh, I go to bed early enough," he replied, "but my nerves sit up."

I have a snapshot of Fifth avenue showing a view from Forty-ninth street northward. It was taken only five years ago and would not be recognized today. With the exception of a church almost every building has either been torn down or remodeled from Forty-ninth street to the Plaza Fountain. And Millionaire's Row has become only a memory. New York, unlike most cities, rarely becomes sentimental about its picturesque thoroughfares. If an old landmark comes down, that is progress.

An expert in a travel bureau announces the wonders of New York may be seen in seven days. But after living here more than 15 years I yesterday discovered gilden gargoyles on the Woolworth Building and a man who makes a good living selling discarded straw hats for stage clowns to smash.

A comedian received this telegram the other day from a friend: "I am bringing the only girl to see you perform tonight. If you can use my name in a gag I'll appreciate it." The comedian responded by reading the telegram. They are no longer friends.

At one of those studio parties where guests sit around in corners and talk piffle, a young dreamer of dreams asked if he might read his latest ode to something or other. "You may," said the hostess, resignedly. "This party has gone scur, any how."

John D.'s First Job

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

W. H. Allen, of the Institute for Public Service, has written a little pamphlet entitled, "My First Job and Rockefeller's." He mentions twelve points about Rockefeller and his first job.

For six weeks 16-year-old John D., after years of farm life and two years of study at high school, walked up and down the streets of Cleveland, O., looking for a job.

What were his preparations for it?

What kind of thinking and what sort of an opinion of himself did he have?

1. He wanted to work. He didn't go to work because he was tired of school or because he wanted spending money. He worked because he liked it. He never thought there was any other way to succeed than work.

2. He had decided preferences. He never consulted any psychologist to tell him what he was fit for. He didn't want to work on the farm and he didn't want to be a retailer. He wanted to sell wholesale.

3. He was prepared. He wasn't entirely green. He could keep books and clerk. He could load and unload produce and could run errands. He only applied for work that he could do well. He knew what he wanted and stuck to it.

4. He pursued his goal. He concentrated, systematized and persisted. He was looking for some firm that wanted a good, healthy, country boy that wanted to work. He never consulted an employment agency nor a vocational counselor.

5. He sought a test. He wanted to learn for himself what he could do. What he was paid did not interest him so much as whether he could do his job well.

6. He liked his job. It was an adventure, even the unpleasant parts of it interested him.

7. He studied his job. He was curious about his business, for it was now his business. He was a part of it. He was keener about growing than about getting and playing. He came early and stayed late.

8. He studied to win people. He was never a mixer, and didn't go around slapping people on the back and calling them Bill and Tom, but he liked the people he met in business.

9. He welcomed criticism and it didn't hurt him to get "bawled out."

10. He was attractively polite. He even felt polite. When others lost their tempers he became more polite.

11. He dressed with noticeable neatness. He always took care of his personal appearance.

12. He studied his mistakes. That is, the only way you learn in this world is by making mistakes. Every new mistake made him more careful and efficient.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

What Have You Done?

"WHAT have you done?" the bright hours cry,
The while they haste, unpausing, by;
"What have you done, for good or ill,
Since dawn lit up the farthest hill?

"Have you some work of lofty worth,
Some child of thought your brain gave birth,
And do you, joyous, fill the day
With good that will not pass away?"
"For me, no great and splendid task
With such rewards as few may ask;

Enough if for a little while
I bring to troubled hearts a smile.
"Enough if sometimes on my way
I change dull tears to laughter gay,
Make some man's outlook seem more bright

Or bring some child a swift delight!"
The glad hours smile and make reply,
The while they hasten blithely by:
"Good is the work which you have done
If to one thought you bring the sun!"

Right Angles

At the Inn

THERE is a whole field of exquisite art which is wide open and unoccupied for the knights of the pen.

It is epitaph writing.

To date it is as haphazard as a crazy quilt and as rough and uncouth as a block of uncarved granite.

But now and then the white monoliths in God's acre bear exquisite gems of sentiment and expression like Stevenson's famous

"Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill."

Dean Alfred's tombstone is delicately carved with this eloquent legend:

"The Inn of a Traveler on His Way to Jerusalem."

And so the good Dean counted himself a transient at that little green inn called a grave.

And it matters not whether the terminal may be called a glorified Jerusalem or Mecca.

Whatever or Wherever or Whenever it may be, every soul, in its hours of threnody and divinity, is painfully conscious of a nostalgia which no terrestrial balm of Gilead can soothe and no domestic fireside alleviate.

And though the negatives should have it over the affirmatives in this post-mortem moot, and though all the cohorts of reason should be the legionaries of annihilation instead of immortality, still the inn of the Dean is the poetry of death and is quite as legitimate as any other poetic symbolism.

The soul is in quest of beauty and will not be denied though logic be contravened and the doubters' dogmas denied.

Look upon death as a tunnel and not a terminus and you step to the rhythmic metronome of laughter and sunbeams.

It is the heritage of every man Yogi-like to obey Bryant and wrap the drapery of his couch about him and lie down to pleasant dreams.
